Farmers Propose Agricultural Nutrient Management

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Two Lancaster County farmers this week presented for public review their draft for a law which would create a new government system for treating agricultural operations in a holistic manner and shield farmers from normal environmental prosecution channels.

The plan is called "Agricultural Resources Act."

According to Allen Weicksel, organizer and spokesman for the Family Farm Movement, and Donald Rank, treasurer and representative of the Lancaster County Farmers' Association, their proposal is an alternative to negotiated nutrient management legislation already approved in writing by all major farm and environmental organizations, the state Department of Agriculture, the governor, and other interests.

Whether or not the concept will be taken seriously by legislators is uncertain.

As of presstime, no elected representatives were associated with the proposal or the two men.

Also, Weicksel and his group, which consists of Amish and Mennonite farmers who normally shy from public activism, were practically lone opponents against the plan currently embraced by the state farm associations.

The draft submitted for public perusal was printed in the format of a legislator's official proposal.

While the draft itself was too incomplete to convey a workable

Davis Family Honored In Tioga County

MIDDLEBURY CENTER (Tiogo Co.) — No two were more suprised to learn the Davis Family was the 1992 recipient of the PaDHIA Herd Management Award for Tioga County than Rick and Janelle Davis.

As last year's winners of the DHIA Top Milk Herd Award, with an average of 22,319 pounds of milk, an increase of 1,089 pounds over the previous year. Rick said he didn't expect another large increase in production. But as the DHIA comparison report confirmed, the Davises' production again increased 1,473 pounds to a total of 23,792 for 1992. Fat content increased from 795 to 884 and protein increased from 715 to 773.

"We certainly don't expect an increase like that next year," Janelle said.

The increases on the Davis farm were an accomplishment to be noted, expecially considering the county average for all herds decreased in all three categories from 1991 to 1992. And the Davises have stayed above the state averages in milk, fat and protein production for the past three years.

If Rick was to name his formula for success, it would be consistency. "We don't do anything special. Just the same thing day in and day out. We try to give them good feed and good breeding, but I'd say overall, being consistent in a daily routine is the best thing for our cows."

Rick and his father Emery work a farm that was started by Emery's dad in the 1920s. The main farm is a consolidation of three separate farms purchased over the years to total 245 acres. The Davises also own another farm with 128 acres known as the Hulbert Place and Rick and Janelle live on a fourth farm, formerly owned by Rick's grandfather Taylor, which is adja-

'Farmer Friendly' Legislation Key, Wenger Tells Pork Producers

ANDY ANDREWS

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Creating a bill that is "farmer friendly" is the key to signing nutrient management legislation into law, according to Sen. Noah Wenger (R-Stevens), who spoke Thursday night at the Lan-Chester Swine Producers' Association annual meeting and banquet.

Wenger, minority member of the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, commented about the attempt two months ago to rush through S.B. 1444, an environmental education bill that carried a nutrient management legislation "rider," before the close of the session. Wenger called the wording on that bill "considerably better," but said "it seemed like a rush kind of thing" and really should have taken more time to see farmer input and consideration.

Wenger updated the Lancaster-Chester pork producers about the status of nutrient management

Farm And Home Foundation Reviews Year

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — "Good leadership is hard to come by but we have a very good board to get things done," Ken Rutt told those attending the 29th annual banquet of the Farm and Home Foundation.

At the January 19th banquet, members elected seven directors and reviewed opportunities for extension services in Albania, Poland, and Russia.

The seven newly-elected directors will join those with unexpired terms for a combined board of 21 directors. The board oversees the Farm and Home Center, a multipurpose facility that serves rural and urban interests. The Center, built in 1968, is a living monument to the county's agriculture and agribusiness industry.

One of the major functions of the board is to award scholarships for the study of agriculture and family living.

Extension director John Schwartz reported that 18 applications have been received for Farm and Home Center scholarships this year. Of those, 10 will be selected

Corn Growers Release Five Acre Results

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) has announced the winners of its 1992 Five Acre Corn Club Program.

Awards were made for both three-year yield averages as well as for highest yields during 1992.

One hundred and thirty five corn growers participated in the program this year. This year's results reflected the excellent growing season in many areas of southern Pennsylvania.

Yields were a record high, averaging 163.4 bushels per acre. Seven entrants reported yields of more than 200 bushels per acre and another 38 reported yields of more than 175 bushels.

For the 1992 classes, first place in the large harvest shelled corn class went to Clarence Keener Jr. from Lancaster with a yield of 211 bushels per acre. In the regular harvest size class, Larry E. Moyer of Mertztown took the honors with a yield of 214 bushels per acre.

The first place award in the ear corn hand harvest class was won by Glenn Bros. Dairy from McConnellsburg with a yield of 213 bushels per acre. Kenneth Schlegel of Fleetwood took the top honors in the machine harvest ear corn class with a yield of 191 bushels per acre.

In the three year average class for shelled corn harvested from a large (more than 3 acres) sample, first place was awarded to William Bissinger from Bloomsburg with an average yield of 165 bushels per acre. Second and third place in this class went to D. Richard Snyder of Mountoursville and Daryl Alger of Palmyra with average yields of 161 and 155 bushel per acre, respectively.

In the three year average class for shelled corn harvested from a regular (less than three acres) sample, first place was awarded to Paul Lechner from Oley with a yield of 189 bushels per acre. Second and third places in this class went to Donald Lichtenwalner of Macungie and Joe Matejik of Mechanicsville with average yields of 187 and 185 bushels per acre, respectively.

In the ear corn class, the three-year average first place award went to Lester Poust of Muncy, who has averaged 187 bushels per acre. Second and third place awards went to Sid Lewis from Wysox and Sandy Ridge Farms from Shippenville, with yields of 177 and 163 bushels per acre, respectively.

Awards will be presented at the Pennsylvania Corn Conference, to be held in March. The Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association has more than 350 members statewide.

W-L measures success one grower at a time.

We could show you stacks of research data that demonstrate the benefits of planting W-L alfalfa seed, but the most important barometer of our success is the success of growers like you.

Growers have depended on W-L Research as a provider of superior alfalfa seed for over thirty years, and in that time W-L has developed seed well-known for its value. At W-L, "value" is defined as long-term yield, persistence, and quality. These characteristics of W-L varieties are the cornerstone of our success, and we continue to measure our success as we always have — one grower at a time.

Forage Ahead with W-L!

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JANUARY 25-31, 1993

RACCOONS MATING NOW.

A SPECIAL GIFT

January 27 is the birthday of Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, English mathematician, logician, and Oxford professor Although his scholarly works are largely forgotten, he is well-remembered as Lewis Carroll, the author of Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and Through the Looking-Glass Dodgson hand wrote and illustrated the first manuscript and presented it as a gift to Alice Liddell, daughter of an Oxford dean The story was later revised and expanded for publication Dodgson's friendship with Alice and in particular, a trip upriver from Oxford to Godstow with Alice and her sisters, provided the inspiration for the story

Better to be driven out from among men than to be disliked of children. — R H Dana

TIP OF THE WEEK

EARTHWISE

If you live in a part of the country where winter's storms can mean power failures, remember to check your emergency supplies periodically. Keep some matches with the candles and be sure they're in a place you can access safely in the dark. Remember to turn off any appliances, such as electric stoves, to avoid accidents when the power comes on. If you have advance warning, fill pots and pans with fresh water for drinking. Food will stay frozen up to 48 hours if you keep the freezer door shut.

TURKEY PATTIES WITH MUSHROOMS

2 pounds ground turkey
1 cup sliced mushrooms
2 tablespoons finely chopped onions
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons margarine

Finely chop half the mushrooms and sauté with onions in half the margarine. Sauté remaining mushrooms separately and set aside. Combine turkey, salt, and onion mixture and shape into 6 patties. Broil 5 minutes on each side and serve immediately with reserved mushrooms.

Makes 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

NORTHEAST: Rain and snow, sunny and milder south, then rainy, clearing and mild

SOUTHEAST: Clear and warm, then showers, finally turning colder.

MIDWEST: Sunny and warm, heavy rain and snow north, then milder; cold wave, snow.

3 Reasons Why Your Next Cage System Should Be CHORE-TIME®

Reason Number 1

A Better Feeder

You save feed, electricity and parts with Chore-Time's Ultraflo feeder.
Ask any grower who has an Ultraflo Feeding System.
Call or send for our list of 76 farms with 182 Ultraflo houses in the Northeast.

Reason Number 2

Heavier Cages

Chore-Time Cages are 11.2% Heavier, That's Over 3½ Tons More Wire Per House!
(Based upon 108,000 bird house. Call or write for actual test data)

Reason Number 3

Over 14 Million Layers In Our Region

Since Chore-Time introduced the Ultraflo Feeding System in 1985, over 180 houses have been sold in our sales area which is Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, New York and New England.

Think about it. In only 7 years, 1 out of every 3 layers in our region has been switched to Chore-Time with Ultraflo! Many farmers bought one Chore-Time house and after seeing the results purchased more. Some large farms have replaced all their non-Chore-Time cage systems with Chore-Time cages and Ultraflo feeders.

Can over 180 houses and 14 million layers since 1985 in the Northeast be wrong? Why not check out the facts for yourself? Call today or send for the list of all Ultraflo houses in the Northeast.

OPINION

Saving Agriculture And The Bay

I was recently asked to address the Delmarva Advisory Council's Agriculture and the Chesapeake Bay Conference. The audience included over 300 farmers and key members of the region's farm bureaucracy. I welcomed the opportunity to address what I feel has been a very fortunate perception among some farmers and environmentalists, namely, that we are on opposite sides of the proverbial fence. I titled my talk, "Cooperation, Not Confrontation: The Key to Saving Agriculture and the Bay."

Make no mistake, farmland, like every other land use, certainly contributes its share of pollution to the Bay. Farmers can and must do more to reduce their impact, and the Chesapeake Bay Foundation (CBF) has been at the forefront of efforts to address agricultural pollution. We have pushed for incentives, education, consistent enforcement of existing regulations, and new laws where needed, just as we have done with industry, sewage treatment plants, developers, watermen, boaters and homeowners. But it is important to realize that farming, by definition, keeps the land porous, allowing rainwater to be asborbed if proper management practices are followed. Most other active uses of the land are more detrimental to the Bay. Developed land, for instance, is impervious, channeling stormwater and pollutants rapidly into the nearest water body.

We at CBF want farmland to remain in agriculture. Unfortunately, just the opposite is happening. Sprawling low-density residential and commercial development is rapidly converting farmland. What's worse, scattered development undercuts the infrastructure of agriculture. "Nuisance ordinances" are encouraged by those neighbors who may not like the noise or pungent aroma of nearby farms. Eventually, farm suppliers go out of business or change products to more suburban oriented needs. Local markets for crops disappear. And taxes go up because residential development never produces enough revenue to meet the new demand for schools, sewage treatment plants, landfills, police protection, etc. Farmers, hit hard financially, are often forced to sell off more land. The vicious cycle continues, while the community and the economy of farming decline.

Rural residents must retake control of their own destinies by planning for the future of their region. Counties must establish mechanisms to realistically assess how much growth is desired, where it is to be located, how to effectively protect sensitive areas, and where agriculture should remain as the predominant land use. Desired growth is accommodated, taxes are kept in check, the Bay and its tributaries are protected, and agriculture is at least given a fighting chance. If a system of purchased or transferable development rights is also established, farmers will have the opportunity to realize the equity in their land without losing ownership. In this scenario, everyone wins and no one loses.

Finally, it is important to realize that in addition to agriculture, sewage treatment plants are also a major source of nutrients to the Bay. Although compliance and even technology are still far from perfect, vast reductions in pollution have been achieved over the last few decades. The billions of dollars in cost for treatment plant construction and upgrades have been borne, appropriately, by the taxpayer.

The amount of public funds dedicated to reducing agricultural pollution, on the other hand, has been miniscule by comparison, perhaps one percent, at best. From a strict cost-benefit--analysis, wouldn't it make sense to rethink this allocation formula in the future?

Saving agriculture and protecting the Bay are compatible goals. Farmers and environmentalists can either learn to work together and have some chance of a better future, or we can fight with one another. Sadly, there are some strident voices in the land — extremists on both sides of the fence who feel their agenda is advanced by division rather than coalition. We at the Chesapeake Bay Foundation categorically condemn that approach. Quite simply, we need agriculture, and we believe farmers need us. Together we can achieve enormous progress. We are committed to working with farmers, not against them, in pursuit of our long-term common interests.

To Set Dairy Investment Priorities

Dairy farming is a complex business that requires a large investment of labor and capital.

One of the goals of a dairy farmer is to show a good, quick return on the dollar, to build equity in the business rapidly, and to keep debt at a manageable level. To achieve this, investing in healthy, productive cows should be your first priority.

These cows will generate income quickly in the form of milk sales and later on as cattle sales. They also reproduce, and as the young stock mature, they increase in value.

The next priority should be to invest in good feed and good herd replacements. Minimize investments in land, buildings, and equipment until the herd is producing well and is paid for. Until then, it will be cheaper to rent facilities and land and purchase good used equipment.

In other words, grow into the business at an affordable rate. You should concentrate on becoming better before becoming bigger.

To Evaluate Composting Manure

Much has been written and said about composting manure. Let's take a look at some of the advantages and disadvantages.

Some of the advantages include:

- Composting shrinks the volume and weight of manure and reduces its moisture level.
- Nutrients become more stable and are less apt to leach.
- The composted material may be stored year-round and marketed or applied to fields at more appropriate times.
- You usually have fewer fly and odor problems.

Some disadvantages include:

- Composting takes time.
- The process requires special knowledge and management.
- For good composting, piles must contain a proper balance of materials.
- The piles need to be turned or aerated regularly. Turning the piles requires extra stack areas, so piles may be transferred from one area to another, or the pile may be mixed and aerated with the aid of expensive machinery and equipment.
- Runoff from composting sites must be contained and managed properly.
- Markets need to be developed.
- Permits and record-keeping requirements might be needed.

Composting will not magically solve a farmer's nutrient management problems. Consider the costs, advantages, and disadvantages carefully when determining if composting manure will fit into your farming operation.

To Become Politically Active

A new administration has taken office in Washington D.C. and a new legislature has begun its work in Harrisburg. These new governments will be dealing with legislation that will be affecting agriculture.

To develop good laws, your representatives need to hear from you. These government officials need to be educated about farming. Many of them have had no contact with agriculture or understand the reasons for agriculture's success.

The only way to maintain important agricultural programs is to fight for them. You need to inform the legislators of the importance of agricultural research, education through cooperative extension, uniform grading standards for effective marketing, need for strong animal disease diagnostic laboratories, and plant and animal disease prevention programs.

As food safety and environmental legislation is being developed, take an active role in offering workable ideas to address the issues.The more people involved in the development of laws and rules and regulations, the better they will be.

Do not depend on your neighbor or agribusiness to express your opinion. Do it yourself. A simple letter telling who you are, where you live, the size of your farm, and your ideas is all that is required.

Become involved in the political process and work to keep agriculture a growing industry.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

HOW MANY DIVISIONS DOES CHRIST HAVE?
January 24, 1993

Background Scripture:
1 Corinthians 1:1 through 2:13.
Devotional Reading:
1 Corinthians 2:1-13.

If I remember this story correctly, it was during one of their World War II meetings that Winston Churchill was speaking of the influence of the pope. With a sardonic smile, Stalin asked: "How many divisions has the pope?".

Of course, Stalin was a devotee of "godless Communism", so we can understand that he was contemptuous of the power of religion. But his dismissal of spiritual power is shared by many who profess to be Christian. The fact is that, regardless of what most people may profess about the supremacy of spiritual values, most of us live as if we shared Stalin's disdain for them. When it comes to getting something done in what we perceive as "the real world", we too want to know "How many divisions has the pope?".

It's not that we dismiss spiritual power completely; we know that it works — sometimes, if we're willing to wait long enough. But, in business, in politics, in community life, and in the world at large - and sometimes even in the church — secular power seems to get the job done faster, more surely and more obviously — if not everlastingly.

TEMPORAL POWER

And that's the rub, isn't it? Secular power, for all of its immediate and visible success, does not last and in the long run does not get the job done. Stalin's divisions, as well as those of Churchill and Roosevelt, won World War II. But the armies of the Allies did not win the peace, nor even solve the problems that caused the war in the first place. In the long run, the power of armies, governments, and material might does not prevail.

In Jesus' day, the Jews looked for temporal power, a messiah to lead them in military revolt against the might of Rome. That's why Jesus was such a disappointment to so many, for the cross was a symbol of weakness and defeat. This is what Paul meant when he wrote, "For Jews demand signs . . . but we preach Christ crucified, a stumbling-block to the Jews . . ." (1:22, 23).

If the Jews looked for power, the Greeks looked for wisdom. Not just wisdom per se, but wisdom to reveal the meaning and purpose of life. With their philosophy, the Greeks sought the enlightenment of the intellect. Plato, Aristotle, Plotinus and others sought to unlock life's mysteries. And that is why so many of them found Jesus Christ such a disappointment, for the cross seemed no explanation at all. The Gospel was downright foolishness.

THE POWER OF THE CROSS

But Paul knows that, just as in the long run the power of the world turns out to be ineffectual, so the wisdom of the world is its real foolishness. As Paul puts it ". . .the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men" (1:25) and "God chose what is foolish in the world to shame the wise" and "what is weak in the world to shame the strong" (1:27). Our secular concepts of what is powerful and wise, for all their attractiveness, turn out to be a total disappointment in the long run.

The key is the cross of Christ: '. . . to those who are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God" (1:24). Human power and human wisdom, no matter how great and compelling, fail in the long run. What works, what delivers the goods, is the wisdom and power of God: "For the word of the cross is folly to those who are perishing, but to us who are being saved it is the power of God" (1:18). In the cross of Jesus Christ we see the only power and the only wisdom that ultimately work and endure: the gracious, self-sacrificing love of God in Christ.

Stalin and his kind have never understood that. Do we?

For me, the test of any alfalfa is how many pounds of nutrients per acre it produces.

I'm as interested as the next guy in what researchers are doing to improve the alfalfa varieties on the market today. But sometimes, I think seed companies forget that more leaves or better disease resistance by themselves don't produce more milk. The bottom line is pounds of nutrients per acre.

That's why I plant Multi-plier alfalfa from Jacques. Sure it's a multileaf and has good winter-hardiness and terrific disease resistance. But all that says to me is that Multi-plier has the potential to produce more pounds of nutrients per acre on my farm.

I look at my corn silage hybrids the same way. So I also plant a lot of 7970 from Jacques. Yes, it's big and leafy and yes, it makes a lot of grain and fits my operation. But my analysis only measures total digestible nutrients and that's what I'm looking for.

I'm open to new alfalfa varieties and silage corn hybrids, but only if they'll deliver more pounds of nutrients per acre than my Jacques' Multi-plier and 7970.

Bovine Genetics: Beyond A.I.

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

OXFORD (Chester Co.) — One of the leading authorities on bovine genetics Thursday had some good news and bad news for dairymen interested in laboratory techniques for genetic improvement.

Dr. George Seidel, researcher at Colorado State University, and world-renowned for his knowledge in reproductive physiology in cattle, was one of several speakers to address this year's Penn-Jersey Dairy Expo, an annual educational forum for dairymen jointly sponsored by extension services in Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

On Thursday, at the first location, Union Fire Co. No. 1, in Oxford, Seidel talked about a number of high-tech genetic issues and frequently presented the advantages and disadvantages of each, as is currently understood.

The Penn-Jersey program is held in two different locations over two days, but it is the same program both days so that dairymen from both states can get the opportunity to hear the same speakers. The second program was held yesterday in Easton.

The joint venture budget also allows the program to sponsor top-level experts on issues of interest to dairymen.

For example, Seidel said that while embryo transfer is successful and improvements are currently being worked on for better pregnancy rates and embryo viability, the downside is that the cost of using the technique for herd genetic improvement isn't justified by the return in the milk check.

He said that using E.T. on any but the best cows, and unless a calf can be sold for more than $1,000 at six months of age, the use of embryo tranfer techniques in breeding programs is probably not justified.

"But money isn't everything. Think of it (using leading edge genetic techniques) as entertainment value," he said, offering that most people who breed cattle do so because of their interest in the animal, not merely for bottom line profits.

Seidel, while not knocking the embryo transfer businesses which are in existence, said that for the average dairyman, using regular artificial insemination and good mating techniques will improve the herd genetic pool profitably, if not as quickly as can embryo transfer.

He did note that about half the bulls in A.I. are the result of embryo tranfer work, but he said that reflects more the interest of those with the best cows, not necessarily because the bulls are better.

Seidel is a regular contributor to Hoard's Dairyman, received a bachelor's of science degree from Penn State University, a masters and doctorate from Cornell, has been a research fellow at Harvard Medical School and did a sabbatical at Yale to learn microsurgical techniques for embryos. He has been at Colorado State University since 1971 and has been deeply involved in cattle reproduction.

Other speakers at the exposition included Jim Putnam, of Springfield Farm Credit, Mass., who talked on financial management in an unstable milk market; a panel of farmers — Dr. Robert Graves, Don Quick, John St. John, and Gordon Wood — with different experiences with environmental problems; and Dan McFarland, multi-county extension agricultural engineer, who talked about cow comfort.

There were also a number of commercial exhibits at the fire hall auditorium for the more than 90 people who attended.

Seidel explained that the genetics program at Colorado started with the college retaining a bull stud that was created for research into A.I.. The college retained and marketed the semen in a semi-commercial enterprise.

He said it expanded into a semi-commercial embryo transfer program, which was later dropped. Over time, the college collected about 6,000 embryos and used many for research and for teaching. Many people who now practice embryo transfer techniques gained their first experience at the Denver college, he said.

He said that work started off in beef cattle primarily with the Simmental and Limousin breeds which were a rarity at that time.

Since then, with the advent of embryo freezing techniques in 1979 and later sexing and cloning and improved handling techniques, the research has steadily been revealing more and more about the complex nature of reproduction and the effects of genetic manipulation.

Cloning, for example, though not commercially ready, is being done to produce pregnancies every year.

Embryo transfer work is estimated at about 160,000 pregnancies in 1992 in North America, about 80 percent in the U.S., 20 percent in Canada. He said Europe is catching up. About 30 percent to 50 percent of embryos are frozen.

The biggest fringe benefit to using embryo transfer is the ability to prevent the spread of communicable diseases from female to offspring. This is possible because of the effect of an embryo's outer wall, a gelatinous capsule that surrounds the one-sevenhundredth-inch diameter embryo, he said.

The drawbacks to using embryo transfer is cost, difficulty of predicting how many embryos will be collected by flushing any specific cow, and it's more difficult to predict pregnancies.

He said a study of cows and the number of embryos harvested showed that 20 percent of the cows give almost half the embryos, while almost half of the cows give only 11 percent.

A lot of research remains, he said, and he briefly discussed the wave-cycling of bovines that was recently discovered.

Michael O'Conner, PSU dairy specialist, has also spoken at recent, local seminars about the wave-phenomena of follicular development in cattle and its implications on breeding cattle and heat detection.

Similarly, the wave effect may have an affect on success with flushing.

Other drawbacks to the application of leading edge techniques include a reduced pregnancy rate with frozen embryos that is still being worked out. He said that frozen embryos are only 75 percent to 85 percent as successful as non-frozen embryos, which aren't 100 percent successful.

Sexing eggs and sperm has been a topic of interest, but until recently predictions were not given much credibility because of a lack of a quick enough technique for separation between the two different sexes.

The technique used most successfully, though there are others, consists of shooting a very fine stream of fluid containing the sperm out through the end of a very small, vibrating needle which causes small droplets, each carrying a sperm.

Dr. George Seidel, of Colorado State University, talks with Dr. Lawrence Specht, from Penn State University, about bovine genetics, during the Penn-Jersey Dairy Expo. An interested member of the audience listens to the two.

Your Farm Credit Banker. Nobody Knows The Field Better.

You'll find Farm Credit Bankers buttoned up, ready to talk short- or long-term loans, mortgages and sophisticated lines of credit.

Underneath the shirt and tie, you'll find the one thing the other banks don't offer. A fellow farmer.

Most Farm Credit loan officers were born and raised on farms and got their college degrees from ag schools.

And, if that's not enough, every single one of our loan officers goes through the toughest ag lending training program in America.

That means when you talk to a Farm Credit loan officer about any kind of ag loan, you won't have to waste your time translating to someone who's book smart but farm foolish.

What's more, because Farm Credit loan officers understand farming as well as they understand finances, they're not only smarter, they're faster. After all, they have the same loan closing authority as many local bank presidents.

So when you need competitive rates or creative options, see your local Farm Credit banker. Because nobody knows the field better.

GIGANTIC SELECTION

GOLDEN LEAF TOBACCO CO. INC.

Attention Tobacco Farmers

Do you want the freedom of choice to sell your tobacco where you want to?

Golden Leaf Tobacco Co. feels that as American farmers you should have a choice to sell your tobacco any place that you want; whether it by auction or private sale. We strongly support that right.

As a major buyer in Lancaster County for over ten years, we have gained the respect of major tobacco companies through out the U.S. Through that respect, we are representing several of them in this county.

Before Christmas of this year we were the largest buyer on the auction system. On December 21, 1992, 267,713 pounds were sold at auction. Golden Leaf Tobacco Co. purchased 196,992 pounds from that facility. There should be little doubt in the farm community that we have tried to support the auction system faithfully.

Since that time, new management has demanded that all private sales stop. Why? We call it greed.

We would still like to buy tobacco both at auction and private sale but it must be done in a more peaceful manner. We believe it is the desire of Lancaster tobacco farmers to have both systems.

Please call our office Monday thru Friday 8 A.M. until 4 P.M. and give us your opinion.

Sincerely,
Mac Baily; President
Golden Leaf Tobacco Co.

New Alfalfa Combats Winterkill

BUFFALO, N.Y.—When it comes to finding the right alfalfa for use on heavy ground where winterkill is a concern, experts say that a new highly dormant alfalfa variety called Flagship 75 is just what Northeastern dairy-farmers need.

"Essentially Flagship 75 benefits forage growers by matching fall dormancy and disease resistance to the demands of heavy soils prone to alfalfa winterkill," said Drew Kinder, owner of Buffalo-based Kinder Seed, Inc., exclusive marketer of Flagship 75 alfalfa.

"Years ago many alfalfa acres in New York and New England were seeded to varieties like Iroquois, Vernal, and Narragansett, which had a fall dormancy rating of 2. These old varieties shut down top growth relatively early in the fall, encouraging growth of roots and crowns prior to the onset of winter," Kinder said.

"By 1992, only 7 percent of the 90 alfalfa varieties listed in the Cornell Recommends were as dormant as these older varieties. All the varieties have improved disease resistance, but 93 percent have a fall dormancy rating of 3, 4, or 5, indicating top growth that continues later into the fall," Kinder said.

"It is the classic tradeoff between roots and shoots. Flagship 75 concentrates fall growth in its roots while less dormant alfalfas continue to produce top growth," said Kinder.

Flagship 75 carries the highest rating against Phytopthora root rot, a disease commonly found in heavy soils in the Northeast.

"Big, healthy roots under wet growing conditions give Flagship 75 the ability to survive where other alfalfas thin out," Kinder said.

Flagship 75 is a new multifoliate alfalfa. Standard trifoliate varieties produce three leaves at each petiole. New multifoliate varieties produce extra leaves at some portion of the petioles.

Tests show that Flagship 75 has a 75 percent multileaf expression, giving growers a high leaf-to-stem ratio and improved forage quality, according to Kinder.

Flagship 75 alfalfa is available from leading independent agribusinesses in the Northeast. For more information, contact Kinder Seed, Inc., PO Box 398, Buffalo, NY, 14225, (716)891-8955.

Farmers Union Blasts Office Closings

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Robert C. Junk, Jr., President of the Pennsylvania Farmers Union, expressed his organization's frustration with what he called, "another last-minute political trick on farmers" by outgoing Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan. Junk's comments were in response to Madigan's proposed closing of 18 Pennsylvania county offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

"I'm sure there could be more efficient ways of giving farmers access to the programs and services available from the U.S. Department of Agriculture," Junk said. "But, closing 18 offices is totally unjustified in Pennsylvania and, in our opinion, the Secretary is abusing his authority" he added.

"This not only would take farm programs geographically out of the reach of many farmers, it would remove them from the programs in other ways, too," Junk said, explaining that farmers have had input into farm programs at the local level through farmer-elected county committees since the 1930's.

Junk explained that the 1985 farm bill amended the law governing USDA structure, giving the Secretary limited discretionary authority to combine ASCS offices. "According to the law, the Secretary is allowed to combine counties into one office when he determines that 'there are insufficient farmers to establish a slate of candidates for a local committee and hold an election,'" Junk said, citing 16 U.S.C. section 590h(b).

The farm group leader explained that, despite more than a decade of decreasing government support for agriculture and government inattention to concentration and vertical integration in the marketplace, there remain sufficient numbers of farmers throughout Pennsylvania to meet the test of establishing a slate of candidates for local ASCS committees. "Someone might be able to make a case for closing a handful of offices in the State," Junk said, "but closing 18 of them is just ridiculous."

Junk also pointed out that ASCS has just over 18,000 total employees, while another U.S. Department of Agriculture agency, the U.S. Forest Service, has a staff exceeding 50,000 people. "With 51% of USDA's budget going to food and nutrition programs, and 40% of USDA's staff working for the Forest Service, picking on ASCS seems extreme, to say the least," Junk said.

"In addition, he said, "thousands of the people who work for ASCS are located in Washington, D.C. Why is ASCS the only agency in USDA targeted for closures and why is the Secretary only after the county offices that deal directly with farmers?" Junk asked. "Why does every Under Secretary in USDA need two Deputy Undersecretaries? Why does the Assistant Secretary for Food and Consumer Services, need two Deputy Assistant Secretaries, an Executive Assistant, and a Private Secretary? Why does the General Counsel need a Deputy, four Associates and nine Assistants?" Junk demanded.

Junk said that Congress has been following the issue of reorganizing USDA very closely since the General Accounting Office (GAO) issued a report in late 1988 calling for an overhaul of USDA field offices. "That report compared the costs of running the county office with the amount of benefits paid out to farmers in the county and, at the time, even Secretary Yeutter said the comparison was misleading," Junk said, explaining that the ASCS workload includes nearly 50 different programs, only a few of which involve direct payments to farmers.

A second GAO report in late 1991 sparked renewed interest in the issue, and bills leading to USDA restructuring were pending in both the House and Senate by the end of the last Congress.

"Senator Wofford was an original co-sponsor of S. 2752 last Spring, and Farmers Union basically supported that legislation," Junk said. He explained that the bill would have set up a Reform Commission and given it 100 days to study USDA from top to bottom — every agency at every level — and report back to Congress and the Secretary on needed improvements. "We would have preferred to see field hearings to get farmers' input on how to make farm program administration more efficient, but at least the Commission would have been fair and bi-partisan," Junk said.

"As important as this issue is for farmers and taxpayers, the new Congress and administration should have the opportunity to debate it and decide the direction USDA should take," Junk said.

"First it was his decision to scrap citrus marketing orders, and now this. With just over a week to go in office, Secretary Madigan has taken another last-minute, politically-motivated swipe at the farmers he has been paid to serve," Junk said. "If Secretary Madigan is really interested in the best interests of taxpayers, he might want to start with his own $143.800 annual salary. I think farmers and taxpayers deserve better than to have the Secretary of Agriculture trying to pull the rug out from under farm programs. Maybe Secretary Madigan could do us all a favor by going back to his family's cab company in Illinois right now and leave his last week's salary of $2,765.38 in the federal treasury," he concluded.

New Wool Survey Under Way

DENVER, Colo. — Beginning early next year, sheep producers will no lonoger have to guess at what's happening in the raw wool market thanks to new U.S. raw wool stock estimates being provided by the United States Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS).

In mid-January, NASS will survey about 800 wool warehouses, pools, mills, buyers and processors via mail questionnaires, personal enumeration, and follow-up telephone inquiries: to develop official estimates of raw wool stocks. The Department of Commerce dropped a similar data collection activity in 1988.

Estimates for the U.S. will deal with stocks of carpet and apparel wool and associated microns, and whether the wool is of foreign or domestic origin. Data on stocks of tops, noils, and mohair also will be gathered.

The wool stocks estimates will be published by NASS in the Wool and Mohair report in late March 1993 and by USDA's Economic Research Service in the Cotton and Wool release in May 1993.

cent to the main farm. They rent an additional 150 acres.

Currently, their Holstein herd includes approximately 45 milkers, 15 dry cows and 72 head of young stock. "We try to keep 50 cows milking at all times," said Rick, "but right now that number is down." Several will be freshening in the very near future.

Rick and Emery feed their herd a total mixed ration from an automatic feed cart, along with hay which is distributed by hand. Cows producing over 70 pounds of milk receive an additional one pound of top dressing for every three pounds of milk up to a total of nine pounds of grain.

The feed cart has made a tremendous difference, according to Rick. "We bought the cart in 1988. Our total milk production increased by nearly 2,000 that first year."

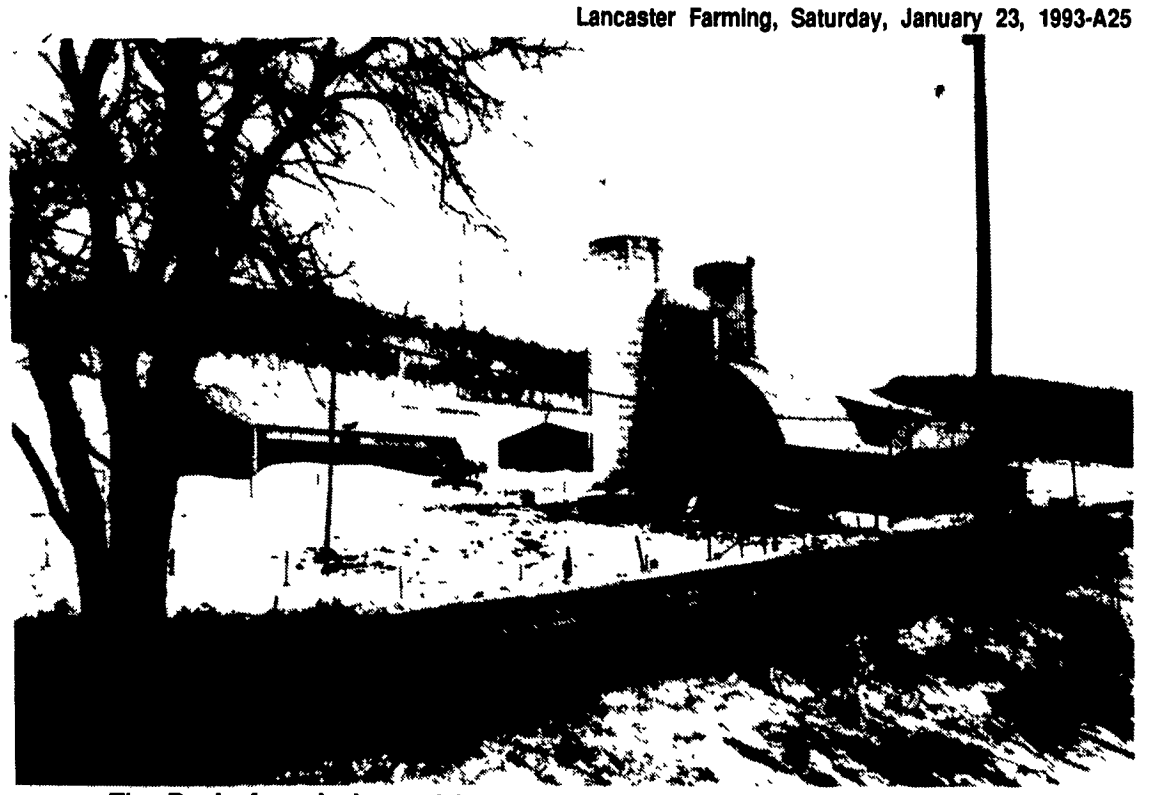
Their top three cows are Callie, with a projected production of 32,800 pounds of milk; Laureen. projected at 34,800 pounds; and Roberta who just finished at 31,800. "Laureen was the top cow last year at 3200 pounds," said Janelle.

The top dressing that these gals receive as additional feed consists of cotton seed, roasted soybeans, shell corn, and corn distillers, according to Rick. The special feed is mixed right on the farm.

The Davises buy their soybean and protein supplement. "And shell corn when we have to," said Rick. They raise between 70 and 80 acres of corn, 20 to 30 of oats, 20 of tripper, 60 to 80 of alfalfa, and 150 of mixed hay. About 100 acres are used as pasture.

High moisture corn is stored in a 14' x 40' silo. Corn silage goes into an 18' x 60' silo. Their 16' x 60' silo contains haylage. They make approximately 1400 square bales and a few round bales of hay to complete their feed program.

Last year Rick and Emery had to buy all their corn because of the drought. This year the ground has been too wet. While they still have corn out in the field, Rick said about 10 acres is not harvestable and they expect to have to buy enough for three or four months.



The Davis farm is located between Marsh and Keeneyville on Route 249.

Rick prepares for milking and feeds a mix of cotton seed, roasted soybeans, shelled corn and corn distillers.

According to Rick, other management practices the Davises incorporate include the use of AI and Sire Power for breeding by a technician. "We use a lot of the young sires. We are on the Sire Power Linear Mating Program where they come and evaluate the cows once a year and run it through the computer. That tells you what sire to use based on the data they put from the cow into the computer to strengthen your weaknesses."

Another practice favored by the Davises is to pre-dip and post-dip the cows at milking time. They have been doing this, in addition to washing the cows, for the past five years.

Rick said he feels a new tile system installed in the mangers this past fall has also made a big difference in his herd. "They eat better, and clean-up is easier."

As much as he enjoys being a farmer, Rick confessed it wasn't something that he had always planned on. After he graduated from high school, he pursued other vocations. A stint in the Army from 1979 to 1982 took him first to Turkey for a year, then to Indiantown Gap. There he met Larry and Lorraine Shuey of Ono, in Lebanon County.

The Shueys proved to be inspirational to Rick. "They have a

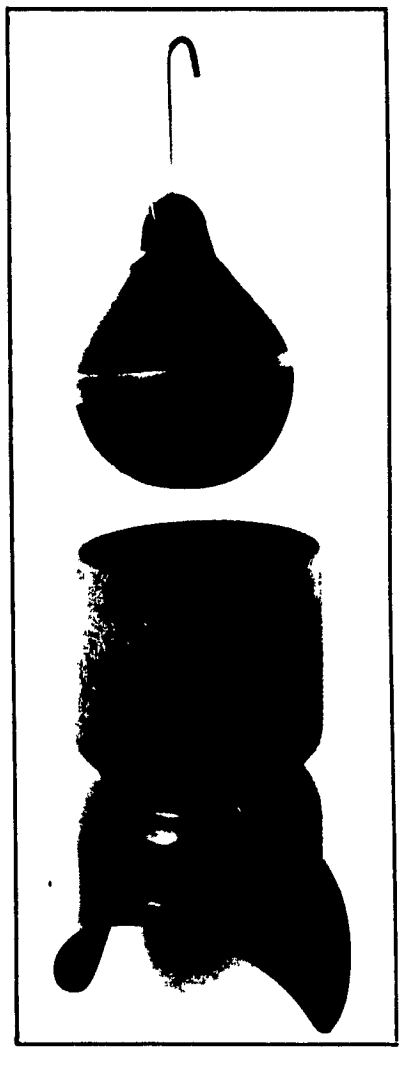
PULL PLUG DRAINS LEAKING?
TRI-COUNTY HAS THE SOLUTION!



APOLLO BALL

This convenient plug for hog manure drains makes a non-leaking seal on the clean-out drain in pull-plug manure systems. It is a major improvement over leaky, concrete plugs.

Sold as a plug and pipe adapter set, the Apollo Ball is a thick, industrial-grade rubber ball that fits into a specially made PVC socket. The ball is filled with sand, which gives it weight but leaves it pliable for a very reliable seal. Molded into its top is a sturdy ring, and attached to this ring is a stainless steel rod with a loop on the end. To open the drain for pen cleaning, you can easily use a simple long-handled hook to catch this loop and lift the ball from its socket.

The socket into which the Apollo Ball Plug seals can be installed on any 8" PVC drain pipe. And in new construction of hog barns, it can be easily included in poured concrete flooring.

Also can be adapted to 6" PVC drains.

Strange To Be Keynote Speaker

MILLHEIM (Centre Co.) — Noted author, speaker, and rural farm activist Marty Strange will give the keynote address at the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture's (PASA) second annual Farming For The Future Conference to be held Feb. 5 and 6 at the Nittany Lion Inn in State College.

Strange is program director and co-founder of the Center for Rural Affairs (CRA) located in Walthill, Neb.

Along with Don Ralston, Strange founded the Center in 1973 to advocate policy and practices to improve the economic, social, and environmental well-being of rural America.

The center, a nonprofit unaffiliated organization, has addressed issues including, but not limited to federal farm programs, tax policy, rural economic development, sustainable farming practices, water policy, the environmental impacts of modern farming practices, and empowerment of rural people.

Marty is the author of "Family Farming: A New Economic Vision" (Univ. of Nebraska Press and the Institute for Food and Development Policy, 1988), a leading critique of industrial agribusiness but a book that offers a vision for sustainable farming and healthy rural communities.

A native of Western Massachusetts, Strange received a bachelor's in sociology and political science from Defiance College in Defiance, Ohio in 1969. Following his graduation, he worked with antipoverty programs (VISTA) in Nebraska for several years as a community organizer and paralegal caseworker. These experiences, and his connections with rural people who were being hurt by existing policies, led to the formation of the CRA. Marty completed a master's in agricultural economics at the University of Missouri in 1982.

Strange has served on a number of boards and task forces at the local, state and national level.

for $1,000 scholarships to be applied toward agricultural and family living degrees.

Scholarship money is generated by the scholarship trust set up by the late Elmer L. Esbenshade and the late Levi H. Brubaker. To date, 331 scholarships have been awarded with a total value of $240,300.

Opportunities in Albania

Three members of the Foundation told the audience about the opportunities that they found in other countries to establish 4-H and agriculture programs.

Jay Irwin, retired extension director, reported on his work in Albania, considered the most backward country in Europe. Although it is 80 percent mountains, the country has some of the best farm land in Europe. Irwin showed slides of people planting one seed at a time with homemade hoes. Donkeys and small horses were used to haul supplies.

"Albania looks a lot like it is in the 15th century," Irwin said.

It is plagued with 80 percent unemployment and average incomes of $20 a month. Because the country had been ruled by a tight dictatorship until 1991, many of the older people are skeptical of Americans, unlike the younger generation who is eager to learn all they can from them. Part of the reason for the fear results from a dictator who convinced the people that Americans would invade Albania. To protect it, he had 360,000 bunkers built. These are almost everywhere and would be useless in face of an actual war. While there, Irwin worked with VOCA to teach programs about organizing farmer's cooperatives.

It does not rain in July and August, so the land must be irrigated. While Irwin and his team were in Albania, they could find no water to purchase and running water was seldom available in the city. The team needed to brush their teeth in Pepsi.

The people, Irwin said, were friendly and pleaded for Americans to come help their country.

Poland

Connie Rutt reported on her work in helping set up 4-H programs in Poland for three weeks. Although Zoann Parker, 4-H Extension agent and other Penn State extension workers have worked in Poland, Connie was the first volunteer leader to work with students and teachers.

It was hard to change the ideas of the older generation because they have been oppressed and the country has been demolished so often, Connie said. One big difference between Poland and the U.S. is that students, when finished with primary school, choose a career they would like to work in and then attend technical boarding schools to be trained academically but not with hands-on activities.

Connie spent five days each with several different schools to teach the students about free enterprise, western style cooperatives, and marketing skills. She and her team stressed leadership and decision skills and had the students practice parliamentary procedure.

Although cows were milked twice a day, the team drank no fresh milk during their stay because the milk sets out for hours without refrigeration. Farmers receive only 10 cents per liter of milk so they find it more economical to feed the milk to pigs.

"There is a big necessity for the people to learn how to care for milk," Connie said.

At the farms Connie visited, the pigs ran loose and the cows were tied by their horns. The cows are black and white but appear to be a cross between beef cattle and a cow rather than a Holstein.

Russia

John Wolgemuth went with a team of five to help set up a model farm in Russia. To their chagrin, when they arrived, they were offered a 30,000 acre farm, which they refused.

During the stay, the team toured an experimental farm and a feed mill, which had 480 employees. Wolgemuth estimated that a mill of that operation should have employed only 50 people.

"The main thing I learned during my visit is that it doesn't need to make sense," Wolgemuth said of Russia's methods of doing things. "Everything is subsidized."

He was alarmed to hear that only 30 percent of the food produced in Russia reaches the consumer; the other 70 percent is wasted.

According to Wolgemuth, the government seems unstable at this point, and the team was advised not to invest any money until the government is stabilized.

Wolgemuth found that professors and leaders were eager to discuss bibilical teachings.

A professor told Wolgemuth, "What you're offering with Jesus Christ and biblical values is what we need. We need to know how to live."

Newly-elected officers include the following: Mrs. Martha Jane Bomberger, Elm; Richard Haas, Lancaster; Edward Hess, Leola; Harold Rohrer, Lancaster; Larry R. Weaver, New Holland; Kenneth Rutt, Quarryville; and Robert Zook, Lancaster.

In addition to Rutt, who is president, other officers include Robert Zook, vice president; Lilli Ann Kopp, secretary; and Richard Haas, treasurer.

In other business, treasurer Richard Haas reported a net income of $16,553 for the Foundation. He noted that 1992 was the first full year the Farm and Home Center has been heated by gas. It cost $26,000 compared to $35,000 in 1991 and $40,000 in 1990.

Landscape renovations are completed. A landscape open house last year attracted 300 persons. Due to the interest, a pansy open house is planned for the spring and a perennial and annuals open house in the fall.

Despite Cheese Plant Strike, ADC Expects Good Year

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Because of the ongoing Beatrice Cheese Inc. processing plant strike near Allentown, Atlantic Dairy Cooperative (ADC) members should expect less in the way of dividends at the end of the year.

That's the message given to about 140 ADC members at the District 3 annual dinner meeting on Tuesday from Dr. Paul E. Hand, general manager. Also, District 12 met on Thursday, with the election of member representatives.

The cheese plant normally handles about 18 percent of the milk taken daily for processing from the cooperative, but because of the strike, the cooperative is taking in more milk than it can handle now — about 1.2 million pounds extra a day. That's about 26 extra tankers, according to Hand.

The issue, involving work at the plant near Allentown, will continue, with more than 150 employees involved in the strike. Hand said ADC does not know what the Beatrice plans are, but it is likely to take months before the issues are resolved.

Hand said it is the issue of overtime, written into the workers' contract at Beatrice, that is causing the conflicts. Hand said ADC continues to suffer substantial losses.

"It's a major problem, and it will affect our bottom line at the end of the year," he said.

Whatever the outcome of the strike, however, ADC should still have a good year financially, according to the general manger. Milk production is up about 2 to 3 percent, and if the export market would become healthier, prices could improve. Also, in 1992, membership has increased for the first time since the merger of Inter-State and Lehigh Valley cooperatives in 1987.

Still, members are receiving about $1-$1.50 per hundredweight price higher than the $10.10 support price. ADC projects the price to average about $13.10 for 1993, down about 50 cents from 1992 levels.

The price is more normal and seasonal now, falling for the spring, but should rebound by the end of the year, according to Hand.

In the meantime, Beatrice could take six months to a year to resume near to full capacity, if they hire non-union workers, according to Hand. Allentown, hard hit by the recession, has seen businesses such as Mac Truck, Bethlehem Steel, and Ford lay off workers. In one day, he said, more than 200, many unemployed, applied for work at the cheese plant.

Right now, ADC is moving milk to cheese plants that aren't fully equipped to handle it, including Dietrich Dairies, Holly, and others.

Last year, ADC celebrated its 75th anniversary, and a video was shown to the members highlighting the progress of the cooperative through the years. Also, a video of Holly Milk was shown. (Holly won the Outstanding Quality Producing Butter Plant Award from the Land-O-Lakes system for the fourth year in a row.)

Hand also spoke about the successful efforts by the various milk marketing organizations to promote milk products. ADC stands as the ninth largest cooperative in the country, with $20 million in assets.

Robert B. McSparran, president of ADC, said that ag representation at the state and federal levels is declining. He said that only 50 members in U.S. Congress are from strictly ag districts, and there are new districts established that don't reflect the interests of agriculture.

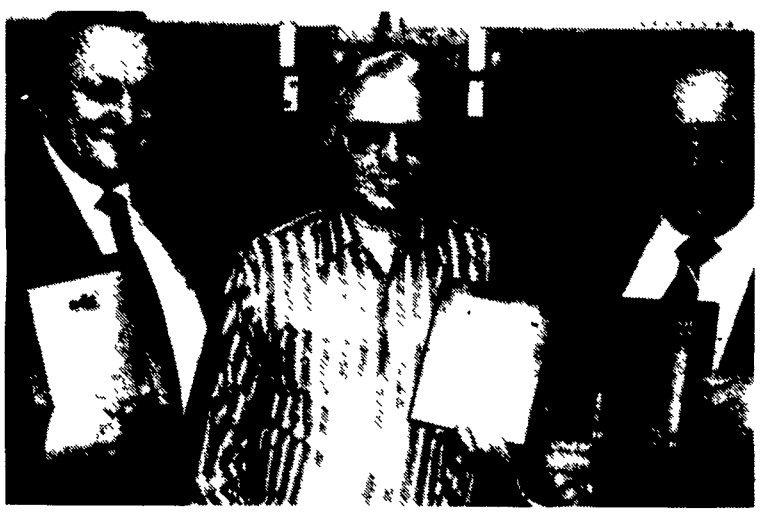
He also spoke about the surgence of BST, and how farmers in Wisconsin are becoming "disenchanted" with the growth hormone used to stimulate milk production. But he said he cannot understand how to legislate advances in technology "out of existence."

At the meeting Thursday, new officers of the two locals of District 12 were elected. From the Strasburg-Paradise local, president is Marlin Beiler, Paradise; vice president, Elvin Fisher, Ronks; and secretary-treasurer is Charles Neff, Paradise. From the Quarryville local, president is James G. Kreider, Quarryville; vice president is P. Robert Wenger, Quarryville; and secretary-treasurer is David E. DeLong, Quarryville.

Dr. Paul E. Hand, Atlantic Dairy Cooperative general manager, spoke at the District 3 annual dinner meeting in Quarryville Tuesday.

At the Tuesday meeting, member 4-H awards were presented to Laurie and Amy Kreider and Joe and Denise Best. Twenty-five year recognition awards went to the following: Francis L. and Ethel V. Kirk; Paul L. Hess and Sons; Susan and Robert L. Kauffman, Jr.; Sam and Marian Long; James A. Hess; and Amos Z. Nolt. Fifty-year awards went to Everett and Florence Kreider, Ever Flow Farm and Marlin Brubaker, Little Britain Agri Supply. Quality Premium awards went to Joe DeLong of Pillar Pride Farm and Edward L. and Edd W. Zug, Jr.

At the Thursday meeting, a 25-year recognition award went to Murl P. Clark. Fifty-year recognition awards were presented to Delmar and Nancy Neff and Roy C. Neff and family.



Atlantic Dairy Cooperative members were honored for 25 years of membership. From left, Jim Hess, Paul Hess, and Francis Kirk.

Ever Flow Farm, operated by Everett and Florence Kreider, were presented with a special 50-year membership plaque. Kerry Munro accepted the award.

Bovine Genetics: Beyond A.I.

A dye is used that shows in different intensities on male chromosomes than on female chromosomes.

Simply, as the sperm pass by a layser, the different dye concentrations cause the light ray to break up differently. The sperm are then given an electric charge — a label — according to the dye intesity.

From there, the sperm as passed through an electric field and the fluid drops separate to different sides, according to polarity.

The technique came from the Lawrence Linear Nuclear Weapons Laboratory in Califorinia, he said.

He said there is still a question as to whether the treatment causes mutations, though it doesn't appear so.

A further drawback is that the rate of separation is at 200,000 sperm an hour. It takes 10 million sperm to artificially inseminate a cow. The time delay to reach 10 million would severly affect sperm viability.

However, it's possible that another technique may be used in conjunction with sexing to produce a viable embryo — invitro fertilization.

He said invitro fertilization, commonly called making test-tube babies, is a technology which has come along quickly and holds promise of being able to be used with other techniques to reduce risk of failure and thus costs.

In the test tube, it doesn't require many sperm to fertilize an egg, because they don't have the environmental hazards prevelant in a natural female reproductive system.

He said it may another two years before that technology comes along, but it is apparenlty on its way. That compares to 10 years ago when there was no method of determining sex. Now there are several.

Seidel also discussed cloning and the special micro-tools used. To penetrate the embryo wall to extract genetic material for transfering to a recipient embryo shell, he said they make their own tool — a tiny, piece of special razor blade instant-glued onto a tiny glass pipe.

He said that they have created many identical twins at Colorado using the cloning technique.

In fact, he said that there have been between 1,200 to 1,500 clone calves already produced in the United States and Canada, mostly from beef cattle.

The drawbacks to cloning apparently begin after splitting down an embryo to more than twins.

It is possible to create three or four, or more, depending on the stage of development of the embryo.

However, he said that there is something going on that is not understood.

First of all, when splitting to twins, there are four possible outcomes — both halves live; one set dies; the other set dies; or both sets die. Each probability seems to be equal in occurance.

Seidel said that it should be noted that identical genetic twins are not identical in appearance, though close. This is because the chromosomes don't have specific genes for each hair follicle and thus can't exactly control color patterning.

The use of identical twins aids in research not only because of better comparisons between the tested animal and the control group, but because it takes fewer animals to achieve a high probability of accuracy.

In principal, it should be possible to take an embryo nucleus and make a large number of viable embryos. The drawbacks are that since cloning is from embryos, one can't be certain that the animal resulting from the genetic combination being cloned is worth having. Therefore, a bunch of eggs would have to be frozen until later.

And, as far as making clones from an embryo in higher cell development, there has been some strange results in the identical offspring.

"They seem dopey when born and wouldn't get up to feed. If you would fool with them over two to three days they seem to become normal and they are normal parents. It's something we don't understand."

Seidel said he and others at Colorado are planning to meet soon to review all the current data to try to get a better look at what might be happening.

legislation. He said that no matter where he goes, to banquets of many sorts, the subject comes up. Wenger said that the bill must be able to pre-empt local township ordinances that may be restrictive to farming, a bill that is "constructive rather than destructive to the community."

The need to enlighten area consumers and retailers about the value of pork must be strengthened more so than ever, according to Ron Butt, president of the association. He told the 124 members present that pork on Lancaster County market shelves is often not from the area, and more area markets need to be formed. Butt said even though the market is not vertically integrated as is the poultry market, producers should get in touch with representatives to put image of pork in a more favorable light.

At the meeting, the following directors were elected: Lancaster County: Marlin Becker, Kurtis Good, and Scott Bailey. From Chester County, Nelson Beam.

Becker, an active 4-H leader from Manheim, is employed in the marketing department at White Oak Feed Mills. Good works for his father Ezra at Good's Buying Station. Bailey is manager of a 550-sow unit in Denver. Beam manages a 150-head of sow farrow-to-finish operation near Morgantown.

At the Lan-Chester Pork Producers meeting Thursday night, the following directors were elected: Lancaster County: Marlin Becker, Kurtis Good, Scott Bailey and, from Chester County, Nelson Beam.

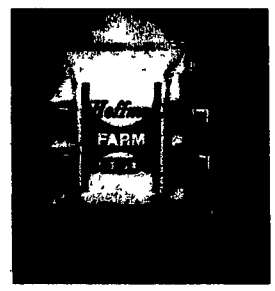
Promise/Attainer

Your Smart Investments In Alfalfa Performance



For maximum feed value from your alfalfa crop, it's hard to beat the performance of Promise and Attainer.

Promise was one of only two alfalfa varieties to produce 6 T/A yields in 1991 Cornell trials. And its two-year average of 8.49 T/A in Penn State trials was tops among 49 varieties.

Attainer is unmatched in milk production per acre, producing 16,200 lbs. of milk/acre in 1992 field trials.

Students Show Responsible Use Of Animals

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)—Students for the Responsible Use of Animals (SRUA) did their part to help give the good news of farming to thousands of people from off the farm who stopped by their display in the upper floor of the new building last week at the Farm Show. Jodie Eberly, president of the student organization on the Penn State campus, said their goal is to educate people about the farm and provide information that refutes information that animal rights organizations distribute on campus.

Students from Delaware Valley College were also helping at the booth. Their display showed the many uses of animal products that benefit the average non-farm person.

Eberly said the student organization was formed two years ago and became an official organization last year.

"Our purpose is education," Eberly said. "We want to educate the community and other students what happens on the farm. Students react with a lot of suprise when they are shown the facts. The animal rights organizations are good at getting their literature out, and when we give tours of the livestock and dairy facilities, students react with 'Oh, is this what happens,' and we have a lot of positive response."

"The animal rights groups hit on 'Factory Farms,' but we show that most farmers care for their animals and are using humane methods to care for their animals."

Tracy Thrapp, freshman at Delaware Valley, said they also encourage students to become acquainted with agriculture. "There are students on campus who don't think cows should be in halters," Thrapp said. "But we try to educate them through our farm/city programs and the annual A-Day that is devoted to agriculture."

Both students agreed that farmers cannot remain passive. "Animal rights organizations are very powerful and influential because the majority of the people don't have a real basis to judge the information they get from these groups," Eberly said. "We as agriculturalists need to tell people what is going on. We need to be proactive in our education efforts."

Eberly said SRUA does not usually become involved in confrontation with animal rights groups on campus. This generally ends in shouting matches and little education is accomplished. However, in the spring, when animal rights groups plan to sponsor a "meat out" day, SRUA plans to hold a meat appreciation day at the same time.

"I don't think there is any system in agriculture that can't be improved," Eberly said. "There are always a few people who don't take care of their animals as they should. But the opponents of agriculture use these exceptions to give the appearance of the majority.

Jodie Eberly, left, Penn State senior, and Tracy Thrapp, Delaware Valley freshman, present information for the responsible use of animals.

structure, comments added by both men during a Monday reading of the proposal outlined a concept of creating a voluntary program that consists of:

• "Whole Farm Plans" for each farm that reports annual sales of more than $10,000 from agricultural commodities raised on the property. The $10,000 limit was used based on 1988 farm census results that indicate about half of the farms in the state would be eliminated from participation. The whole farm plans would include environmental impact studies and operational plans using best management practices (BMPs) as approved by state and county level review commissions and the farm owner.

The plans would be on file locally and would not be open for public review. One local person would serve as a point of contact in each county.

• Three tiers of additional government with special powers of protection for cooperating farmers. The new agencies would consist of commissions headed by an autonomous 21-member state level commission. The special protection and powers would come through written agreements of understanding between existing farm and environmental regulatory agencies.

• The use of policies for BMPs, existing guidelines published by Penn State Extension and the DER for minimizing negative effects of farm activities, and education, instead of regulations to govern farm practices.

• The establishment of a flexible communications relationship between government and governed for changing the governing policy.

Weicksel and Rank made two presentations this week — Monday afternoon and Friday night, after newspaper deadline — on their "Whole Farm Plan" concept for dealing with a farm's environmental management, instead of just nutrients.

The Monday meeting, held at Kreiders' Restaurant in Manheim, was strictly introductary and informational.

The Friday night meeting, which was scheduled to be held at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center, had the dual purpose of informing and to gain signatures on a letter to present to heads of farm organizations and political representatives as evidence of strong support.

The presentations were made to area farmers and representatives of agribusinesses in an effort to gain political momentum.

Of the 21 people attending the Monday meeting, several agribusiness representatives said they applauded the efforts of the two men and supported their concept of a "whole farm plan" approach to deal with the management of all farm nutrients used or resulting from production agriculture.

Others either declined comment or said they were present merely to listen to the two men's ideas.

Suggestions were made to improve the wording of the proposal and to be more specific with details.

Weicksel said the plan resulted out of numerous meetings with thousands of farmers across the state and in Lancaster.

Several reasons have been given for opposition to using normal, existing government channels to monitor and control nutrient pollution from farms.

Those reasons all boil down to a fear of the farmer losing control of his farm.

More specifically, the opposition to using existing agencies for nutrient management basically consist of distrust of the state Department of Environmental Resources (DER); fear of being driven out of business by demands to perform expensive and extensive alterations to a farm operation for nutrient control; fear of loss of flexibility in decision-making for profitability; and fear of farmer-unfriendly government employees abusing positions of authority.

Their expressed goal is to create a system whereby a farm operator is not driven out of business while trying to earn a living by farming and complying with rules they consider too rigid and unrealistic.

Of the legislative efforts which have failed, the most widely accepted version provided for initial action toward agriculture.

The plan which Weicksel and some others apparently oppose is comprehensive in that it also provides for residential and commercial non-farm nutrient sources to be researched and managed.

That measure was contained in the defunct Senate Bill 1444, and most state-level agricultural leaders have expressed an expectation of an almost identical version to be re-introduced to the current Legislature and passed.

Meanwhile, Weicksel and Rank, working with their own organizations, have come up with the Agricultural Resources Act.

The two men had not been publicly associated while Weicksel was heading a fight of the comprehensive nutrient management proposal which was supported by all major farm organizations in the state. That proposal failed because of factors other than the merit of the bill. (See related story, "Why Nutrient Management Failed.")

Now Weicksel and Rank have joined forces to form their concept of how farms should be treated by the government, and to spread the idea behind their 10-page proposal.

Not associated with either group, but active on agricultural issues, Michael Brubaker, had acted as organizer for the meetings, helping to make contacts and create an audience for Weicksel and Rank.

Brubaker is president of, and agronomist for, his agricultural and environmental consulting business, Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Service Inc., Ephrata.

It was apparent at the outset of Monday's meeting that Brubaker was not completely informed of the extent of Weicksel's and Rank's presentations.

Although it was publicized as a 45 minute briefing, with 30 minutes for questions, the meeting lasted in excess of two hours.

Weicksel said that the Family Farm Movement started in Montour County and was picked up in Lancaster County last year, after he was asked by Amish neighbors to do something.

He said that special treatment of agriculture is justified because of the need for food comes before the need for a completely clean environment.

He brought up the recent situation in Samolia as evidence of the importance of farming and food production.

His apparent argument was that, despite widespread American ignorance of food production and delivery, Pennsylvanians need local farmers, and to keep farms, compromise and flexibility must be used.

Weicksel also said that it is important to understand the two elements of any movement — the theme and the goal.

The theme of a movement comes first, he said. In effect he said that the theme of the Family Farm Movement is farmer disatisfaction with non-agricultural intervention in agricultural operations.

He said he was asking the agribusinessmen to support the theme of the act.

The theme of the act is that commercial farming would take responsibility for itself by agreeing to comply with an approved plan of operation, in return for receiving a blanket of protection from prosecution for pollution violations.

Each farmer would help create a whole farm plan that they would help create for managing their farm according to policies set by a farmer-influenced bureaucracy.

The proposal from Weicksel and Rank is to set up a three-tiered bureaucracy manned by farmers and representatives from almost every agency and bureau which has some connection to a farm or farming.

At the state level, an autonomous 21-member commission would be formed which would consist of seven farmers, a county commissioner association representative, representatives from every major agricultural commodity group in the state, the secretaries of agriculture and DER, the dean of Penn State University, and the majority and minority chairmen of the Senate and House Agricultural and Rural Affairs committees.

The state level commission would create, review and approve state policy on best management practices (BMPs) dealing with seven areas: soil erosion and sedimentation; plant and animal nutrients (Weicksel doesn't use the word waste for manure or plant residues. Waste has no value, he said. And since manure has nutrient value, it cannot be waste.); domestic animal pathogens and disease; pest control; forest and woodlots; wildlife habitats; and record keeping.

At the county level, an 18-member commission, with 18 alternates, would be formed and be manned by farmers, agribusinessmen, township supervisors and nonfarmers.

Each commission would be afforded an administrative staff to handle all paper work and communications.

Weicksel said he and Rank have made cost estimates, but didn't want to reveal them. Weicksel said it could be costly.

In the proposal, the men have detailed a first year appropriation of $5 million. They also call for the creation of a restricted account called the Ag Resources Fund.

The funds, although not specified, obstensibly would be used to pay for 75 percent of direct costs for implementing BMPs, and 50 percent of the direct costs for facilities and structure constructions required for compliance. No more than 10 percent of each commission's budget could be used for administrative costs.

Also under their plan, if 40 percent of the eligible farmers in a county fail to volunteer for the program, it would become mandatory for 100 percent compliance.

Their proposal also includes term limitations for those who serve on the commissions, forbidding any consecutive holding of office.

Why Nutrient Management Legislation Failed

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The announcement this week of a proposal for a volunteer farm operation control system to handle the problem of nutrient management on commercial farms may not be received well in light of the support of legislation which almost passed during the last Legislature.

Contrary to what was published in a local city newspaper, a last-minute attempt to pass nutrient management legislation during the previous state Legislature was not stymied because, "a strong agricultural lobby squashed the effort."

The fact is, all concerned with the defunct Senate Bill 1444 — which was an environmental education bill that carried a nutrient management legislation as a rider — expected it to pass on the final day of the Legislature.

It had passed the House on final consideration and was in committee in the Senate, when the Senate adjourned.

However, according to legislators and everyone closely involved with the bill, it failed to get to the Senate floor by the 7 p.m. deadline the Senate set to conclude business.

The only opposition which occured last year was because of the way in which the bill was introduced.

A group of Lancaster County agribusinessmen met during the final days to review the proposal. According to Mike Brubaker, a Lititz agronomic and environmental businessman who had called the meeting, the opposition was not with the substance of the proposed legislation, but with the manner in which it was pushed through the system without prior official public announcement or review.

Further, both executive directors of the Senate and House Agricultural and Rural Affairs committees had said, within hours previous to the Senate adjournment, they were certain of its passage.

Other pieces of legislation had also failed because of time problems.

Delays in action on proposed legislation occured because of a last-minute overthrow of power within the state Senate, with the Democrats overthrowing the Republican's dominance and taking the third highest political position in the state — Senate President pro tempore.

In order of succession, it is governor, lieutenant governor (who is also president of the Senate), and then Senate president pro tempore.

Also, since the majority political party is responsible for oversight of most of the administrative functions of the Senate, there were not only delays because of disagreements among the parties as to leadership of the Senate, but also because of the switch in administrative leadership.

While SB 1444 was approved by every major farm organization heirarchy, and was not reviewed by membership, it was done so because of a lack of time, the opportunity to get a law to protect farmers from local municipal ordinances controlling farm activity, and because it fit within each of the different groups' approved policies.

Perhaps most importantly, it was approved by the organizations because the bill was the result of years of negotiations between environmental and agricultural groups.

However, the fact that it failed to make the previous Senate's deadline for getting on the floor has given the grass roots agriculturalists an opportunity to review the implications of the proposal.

Unless wide acceptance of this past week's proposal by the Farm Family Movement, which is supported by the Lancaster County Farmers' Association, but no state organization, occurs, state officials and Harrisburg insiders expect a version of SB 1444 to reemerge, probably from the House of Representatives.

Lancaster Joins Chemsweep

ROBERT ANDERSON
Lancaster Extension Agent

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)—It's time to round up those old, outdated, no longer labeled, damaged or unneeded pesticides you have and put them behind bars.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is in the second year of a program to put the culprits (canceled, banned, unwanted, or unuseable pesticides on farms) away for good in a safe place. Last year farmers in six counties were given the opportunity to dispose of pesticides through a program called "Chemsweep."

This year, farmers in Lancaster County will be given the opportunity to participate in the 1993 Chemsweep program.

This program is a once and done program. If you do not take advantage of disposing of those pesticides now through Chemsweep you will be responsible for the cost of proper disposal at a later time. I would encourage anyone with any pesticides which need to be disposed to take advantage of "CHEMSWEEP."

All Lancaster County farmers who have Private Pesticide Applicator Licenses will be getting a more complete mailing on Chemsweep.

There is no cost to dispose of pesticides to the grower. If you do not have a pesticide license, or for more information, contact Bob Anderson, extension agent at the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension Office, (717) 394-6851.

PFA "Stunned" At Proposed ASCS Office Closings

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The leader of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) expressed stunned disbelief at the number of farm agency closings announced for Pennsylvania by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) yesterday.

"We're proponents of greater efficiency in government," said Keith Eckel, PFA president, "but the field office eliminations being planned for our state will be a great disservice to Pennsylvania agriculture. In particular, the closing of 18 of the 60 local offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) is far more devastating than we expected. One targeted county, Berks County, is the third most productive agricultural county in the state."

Eckel said farm leaders in PFA's county associations scheduled for closings will be looking at the plans to see how they affect members. "The closings are part of a nationwide effort to streamline USDA," Eckel said. "If it leads to reduced paperwork and time spent by farmers in ASCS offices to enroll and comply with federal farm programs, it will be welcomed by our members. But, if it only leads to more travel time, expense and inconvenience for farmers, we will fight to stop the shutdowns."

PFA is a statewide, voluntary farm organization which represents 23,189 member families in 54 county associations. It is affiliated with the nation's largest farm organization, the 4-million member American Farm Bureau Federation.

A listing of planned USDA county office closings, and the farm community affected, is attached.

Lancaster Unit Of Pennsylvania DHIA Holds Meeting

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)—The Pennsylvania unit of the Lancaster County DHIA met at Willow Valley Conference Center on Thursday afternoon. This group is the remainder of Lancaster DHIA members who have chosen not to join most of the county DHIA members in their move to Raleigh for processing and Maryland for lab testing. About 50 persons attended this meeting.

In the awards presentations, Glenn E. Burkholder had both the top herd management award and the high milk and protein herd. The management award is based on various categories related to good herd management and Burkholder had 133 points. His herd average was 24,794 pounds of milk and 749 pounds of protein.

The lowest SCC herd honor went to Tom Smith of K & Q Swiss with 134,000.

Other award winners in herd management were 2. J. Wilmer Horst; 3. J. Harold Fritz; 4. Robert H. Rohrer & Sons; 5. Tom Smith; and 6. Dale Stoner.

Low SCC herd winners were 2. Samuel K. Fisher; 3. J. Harold Fritz; 4. John King.

State president Frank Orner spoke on the restructuring of county organization and said individual members are eligible to become direct members of Pennsylvania DHIA.

Robert Kendig, national director and immediate past national president, said the new state by-laws were being prepared with regional meetings set for member input. Officials hope the by-law revisions will be ready for approval at the annual meeting in March.

Jim Boyer gave an update on the DRPC committee and introduced the new barn computers that are being introduced on member farms.

Norman Hershey, state treasurer, gave a report of the pricing committee and Dixie Burris, state membership development, explained the new DHIA reports and how to use them.

A new committee was elected to represent the local unit. Those elected are as follows: Richard Barge, Glenn Binkley, James Brenneman, Raymond Good, Richard Rohrer, and Thomas Smith.

At the Lancaster County Unit of the Pennsylvania DHIA are Tom Smith, honored for the lowest SCC herd; Jay Risser, supervisor for 39 years; and Glenn Burkholder, first place in both the herd management award and milk and protein production.

Jay Risser, who has been a supervisor for 39 years chaired the meeting. Lois Ann Risser has 34 years of service. In closing the meeting, Jay said that his main goal after all his years of service is to continue to help maintain the honor and integrity of DHIA records.

Farm Show Dairy Promotions Work

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)—Pennsylvania's Dairy Promotion Partners' activities at the 1993 PA Farm Show sparked media coverage from across the nation.

Most of the coverage came from the Partners' butter sculpture, but additional stories were generated by the new milk carton robot, "Half Pint."

The Partners is a cooperative group of organizations including American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Mid East UDIA/ F.O. 36 Advertising Agency, and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program.

The dairy industry in Pennsylvania was the feature of a story that appeared on CNN Network, several times on Saturday, Jan. 9. The story reviewed the butter sculpture and explained the sculptor's tribute to the state's ice cream industry. Callers to the promotion organizations said that the story aired in Salt Lake City (Utah), Texas, Florida, and North Carolina. CNN is a National Cable News Network, from Atlanta, Georgia.

Because of the CNN feed, stories were also aired on local news programs in Washington D.C. and Binghamton, New York. Photos of the butter sculpture appeared nationwide as well, largely due to the feature story created by the Associated Press. Within the state, stories about the butter sculpture aired on Harrisburg area television stations, WTAJ-TV in Altoona, and stations in the Philadelphia area.

At the Farm Show, the dairy barn featured a new attraction—a moving, talking milk carton robot, "Half Pint." The robot was a media spectacle of his own, especially with television reporters. This "Real" milk carton spent the week delivering industry and nutritional information to show visitors. On the news, the robot was a real "advertisement" for the dairy industry because of its likeness to a real milk carton. "Half Pint" was the first Farm Show attraction seen by Gov. Casey during his annual tour of the show. Reporters crowded the robot as "Half Pint" welcomed the governor to the show and gave Casey a "high five."

"We were excited that our activities at the Farm Show interested the media," said Betsy

This robot milk carton dairy promotion attracted a lot of national attention during the Farm Show. Standing with it is Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Crystal Schweighofer.

Lancaster Farm, With Easement, Sells For $435,000

WILLOW STREET (Lancaster Co.) — Parke and Mary Breckbill's 68-acre farm went on the auction block Tuesday and sold for $435,000 — after the couple donated the development rights to Lancaster Farmland Trust.

According to reports in the Lancaster Intelligencer Journal and New Era, the farm was purchased by Joseph Esh, East Lampeter, for about $6,397 per acre. It is located south of Willow Street off of Fieldcrest Drive, near the Hayward Heath development.

Karen Weiss, of the Farmland Trust, said it was one of the highest per-acre prices for a Lancaster County farm with an easement in place. According to the trust representative, the highest price paid for farm property with an easement in the county was $7,100 per acre for the James Hess farm in Pequea Township.

Average price of an acre of farmland in Lancaster County in 1991 without an easement was $5,393, according to information provided by the county's ag preservation board. With a preservation easement, the price was slightly higher, at $5,639.

Esh farms ground in East Lampeter and owns a 48-acre farm which his brother farms in Fulton Township. Esh spent some time looking for a farm to purchase. He told the newspapers that the reason he purchased it was for farming.

Esh said he was pleased with the price, noting that he didn't expect the price in light of the fact that the buildings were in good condition, when normally you have to spend a good deal of money to upgrade the buildings.

The Breckbills moved to the farm in 1950, and operated a dairy of about 40 milking Holsteins and 40 replacements. Mary Breckbill said they are done farming.

The farm is the 34th preserved solely by the Farmland Trust. An adjacent parcel of 41 acres owned by Breckbill's son Wilber was also sold at the auction, bringing $167,000 and was sold to Dr. Robert and Debbie Moore of Manheim Township. Debbie said she and her husband hope to build on the property in the future, possibly keeping a few horses.

QUALITY INDEX - DAIRY

The Quality Index was designed to simplify the corn hybrid selection process from the Corn Silage Product Menu. This one index is structured to take into account the key quality criteria that could effectively reduce ration supplementation costs and influence milk production potential.

This Menu is designed to profile corn hybrids on forage & grain yield potential and key forage quality traits. Corn hybrids differ in their combination & level of fiber (NDF), digestibility, and protein content. The dairy cow has different Forage Quality requirements that are dependent on her stage of lactation.

Because of these relationships, the Quality Index was created to score each hybrid's quality potential by putting a weighted factor or emphasis on the key quality traits that would have the greatest impact on milk production & profitability. This factoring system is as follows:

QUALITY CRITERIA	HIGH LACTATING
NDF	0%
NDF DIGESTIBILITY	75%
TOTAL DIGESTIBILITY	12.5%
NFC	0%
CRUDE PROTEIN	12.5%
TOTAL	100%

Cattle Feeder's Day Set

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)—The Lancaster County Cattle Feeder's Day is scheduled for Tuesday, February 2, at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster. The theme for this year's event is "Moving Ahead In The Cattle Industry."

Featured speaker this year will be Dr. Gary Smith, professor of animal science at Colorado State University, who holds the prestigious Monfort Endowed Chair in Meat Science. Prior to joining the Colorado State faculty in 1990, he was head of the Department of Animal Science at Texas A&M University for eight years.

Smith's professional memberships include the American Meat Science Association, American Society of Animal Science, and Institute of Food Technologists. His research interests include food safety; carcass evaluation and grading; composition quality, and palatability attributes of carcasses and wholesale cuts; and transportation packaging and distribution of fresh meat. He has received more than 20 awards and honors, including The American Society of Animal Science Meat Science Research Award in 1974, American Meat Science Association Distinguished Teaching Award in 1974, American Meat Science Association Signal Service Award in 1991, and the Headliner Award from the Livestock Publications Council in 1992.

Smith will present two topics addressing "The 1991 NCA Beef Quality Audit" and "Perception vs. Reality — Beef Safety."

Robert Anderson, Penn State extension agronomist in Lancaster County, will present "Mixing Site Safety," a topic eligible for pesticide license credits. The agronomist will also explain "Chemsweep," a statewide effort to dispose of unwanted stored pesticides.

H. Louis Moore, Penn State extension economist, will again provide economic insight with "Outlook For Cattle Feeders."

Addressing the important issue of feedlot ventilation will be Penn State Extension Agricultural Engineer Dan McFarland, and an update on implementing will be provided to help improve beef quality assurance efforts.

No reservations are necessary. Lunch tickets may be purchased at the door until 11:30 a.m.

In addition to the formal program, there will be an opportunity to inspect commercial exhibits and visit other cattlemen. The event will begin at 8:30 a.m. with exhibit visitation and the program starts promptly at 9:30 a.m.

The meeting, conducted by the Penn State Cooperative Extension, concludes at 3 p.m. with a question and answer session.

Davis Family

nice farm, they work hard at it. They gave me a whole different outlook on farming." So when his time was up in the service, he returned to Tioga County to join his dad in the family business.

When they're not farming, Rick and Janelle indulge in other interests. Rick likes softball, hunting, and fishing. Janelle likes to take dance lessons in ballet and jazz. They are involved in their church, she's the choir director and a Sunday School teacher; he's a trustee. They also belong to PFA and the Pennsylvania Holstein Association (with Janelle a director of the county club).

But without a doubt their largest interest is in their family. They are the parents of three children: Stephen, 4; Nathan, 3, and Laureen, 1. These active preschoolers have made Rick and Janelle complete. It shows on the smiles that spread across their faces each time they look at their children. Their smiles exude a contentment they say are a lively family, a happy family, a farming family.

PDPP To Hold Annual Meeting

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)—Dairy producers are invited to learn more about the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program's efforts to meet the dairy promotion challenge.

A fifth annual meeting of the PDPP will be held Feb. 2 at the Atherton Hilton Hotel, in State College. The meeting will also include a presentation by Pittsburgh Pirate commentator, Lanny Frattare.

"We want dairy producers to understand how our marketing plan has been developed to meet the challenges of the dairy industry," said Brian Ross, PDPP program manager. "Our theme, 'Meeting the Challenge,' was created to reflect the many demands that we faced in 1992, and those that remain for 1993."

At the meeting, scheduled to begin at 10:30 a.m., dairy producers will be given a review of Pennsylvania Dairy marketing activities conducted during 1992. Board members and PDPP personnel will be on-hand to answer questions and discuss program functions.

Lanny Frattare, considered the "Voice of the Pittsburgh Pirates," will be the keynote speaker, offering his insights about sports marketing and communications. Frattare has been with the Pirates since the 1970s. On August 9, 1988, he broadcast his 2,000th Pirate game and today, he continues to work in the broadcast booth for the National League East champions. In addition to the Pirates, Frattare has broadcast Penn State football and Ohio State basketball.

As part of the Pennsylvania Dairy "Year in Review," meeting participants will see and hear current advertising campaigns and learn more about specific program for June Dairy Month, ice cream, cheese and more.

The meeting will also feature the selection of Pennsylvania Dairy's "Promoter of the Year." Several finalists will be recognized and the winner will be announced during the meeting program. Dairy and food science scholarship winners will also be recognized at the meeting.

Federation Concerned About Future Of Program

DENVER, Colo.— The U.S. Meat Export Federation (USMEF) is concerned about the future of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Market Promotion Program (MPP), which allocated $10.37 million to foreign market development programs for U.S. red meat in 1993, down from $13.1 million in 1992.

While the percentage of the total allocation that will go to meat export programs this year (seven percent) is similar to that of 1992, the dollar amount has dropped — a reflection of the MPP budget reduction from $200 million in 1992 to $147.7 million in 1993. USMEF is one of 60 agricultural groups that will receive MPP funds in 1993.

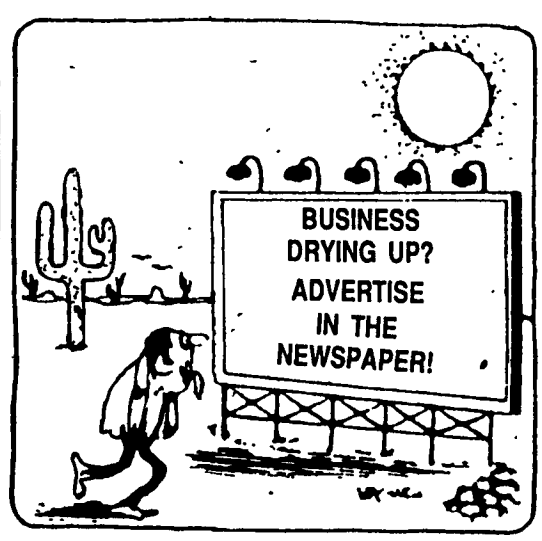
"In spite of the proven effectiveness of USMEF marketing programs at increasing U.S. meat exports and providing American jobs, we are taking a substantial cut," said Phil Seng, USMEF president and CEO.

U.S. meat export levels began to accelerate markedly in the mid-1980s, as investments in foreign market development increased significantly. Exports of U.S beef, veal, pork, lamb and variety meat exports have nearly tripled over the past five years and are expected to exceed $3 billion in 1992. 1987 is the first year USMEF received MPP (formerly called Targeted Export Assistance) funding.

"The tremendous increases we've seen in U.S. meat exports are directly related to foreign market development programs. We would hate to see our hard-earned market share jeopardized by pulling back programs as a result of this reduced allocation," said Stanley Miller, USMEF chairman. "We should be increasing our investments, both private and government, in order to realize the potential foreign markets hold for the U.S. meat industry."

Red meat exports in 1991 contributed significantly to the U.S. economy, providing 135,000 American jobs that are directly related to U.S. red meat exports. Given adequate marketing supports, exports of U.S. beef, veal, pork, lamb and their variety meats are expected to more than double by the turn of the century, reaching in excess of $7 billion. Miller stressed that these export gains alone will create another 175,000 new full-time jobs for the country's work force.

With the future of MPP in question, Seng said USMEF must look for alternatives to maintain the export momentum. Private funding has increased significantly over the past few years, but it would be difficult for private sources to pick up the balance of past MPP allocations overnight.



Extension To Celebrate 75th Anniversary

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — The Franklin County Cooperative Extension Association and Penn State Cooperative Extension of Franklin County will celebrate 75 years of service to the county this winter.

The main feature of the observance will be the 75th annual meeting of the association. It will be held Friday, January 29, starting at 7 p.m. at the Lighthouse Restaurant, three miles north of Chambersburg on Rt. 11.

All residents of Franklin County of legal age are automatically members of the association, and are invited to attend.

A special pictorial 40-page "75th Anniversary Commemorative Booklet" will be distributed to those in attendance. This collector's item traces not only the 75 years of cooperative extension activity within the county, is also a significant history of agricultural development within Franklin County the past 75 years. Special limited-edition, commemorative silk-screened water tumblers will also be distributed as souvenirs at the event.

Since seating space is limited, those wishing to attend should purchase their tickets at the cooperative extension office, 191 Franklin Farms Lane, Chambersburg. Tickets will also be available until the dining hall capacity is reached from the following: Herbert Zeger, Diana Meyers, Clifford Hawbaker, Fran Horst, Shirley Hawbaker, H. Lee Showalter, Robert E. Kriner, Joseph S. Middour, Phil Lobaugh, Dan Brogdon, Marcus Martin, Mark E. Gayman, Irvin Dietle, Francis Reichard, Harold Crider, Wilmer and Miriam Lehman, David R. Longacre, Kenneth Kipe, Linda Bender, James R. Diem, J. Thomas Stouffer, Jeffrey L. Grove, Tom Mossellem, Marie Dice, Janice Burkholder, Shirley Givi-den, Allen T. Brown, Virginia Christman, Mary Jane Hess, Betty Wingert, Bill White, Beatrice Johnston, and Clyde Kuhns.

Chemsweep Moves Through Area

EPHRATA, (Lancaster Co.) — A "Chemsweep" educational meeting is scheduled in the Audion Room of Ephrata Senior High School at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday evening, January 26.

All persons interested in disposing of unwanted chemicals are invited and encouraged to attend this important and very informative meeting. This will be an excellent opportunity for you to learn more about the 1993 PDA "Chemsweep" program being conducted from now until March 31.

This is a free and easy disposal program being conducted in Lancaster and six other Pennsylvania counties this coming year.

Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Service and the Ephrata Adult Farmer Program will also be presenting additional crop production management practices and pesticide applicator update information. Variety trials, pest resistance and production yields of corn, soybeans and alfalfa will be discussed.

The new Atrazine label, other pesticide changes, and applicator update information will be included in the discussion. Two core and two category credits for pesticide license renewal is planned. Call (717) 733-1478 or (717) 733-7124 for more information.

Farm Show Dairy Promotions

Dupuis, Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program spokesperson. "Both the robot and butter sculpture attracted large crowds throughout the week. The interest provided by the media is a tribute to the Farm Show and the strength of the state's dairy industry."

For dairy farmers, this extensive coverage means free advertising for their products and the dairy industry. The Partners estimate that coverage from the show will exceed $10,000 in value and that the coverage generated several million impressions with consumers. Final media evaluations will not be available for several weeks, but the extensive coverage certainly developed a positive dairy industry message with consumers, Dupuis said.

Pennsylvania's Dairy Promotion Partners have been collectively promoting dairy products since 1989. These organizations have combined efforts to save dairy farmers' promotion dollars and create a unified dairy promotion message in Pennsylvania. The PA Farm Show is one of many activities jointly conducted by these organizations.

AKRON (Lancaster Co.) — People from all over the world visit a small pretzel factory located at 1229 Diamond Street in Akron.

They come to buy pretzels, to watch the workers hand twist the pretzels with lightening speed, and to listen to the a capella harmonizing of the assembly-line workers.

With a smile of satisfaction, Clarence Martin, owner of Martin's Pretzels, surveys the pretzels that spill from the bake ovens and the assembly line workers whose voices and fingers never miss a beat as they form soft mounds of dough into pretzel shapes and sing their favorite hymns.

"What better job could I have?" he asks, "than to make a product good for mankind and spread the joy of the Lord with singing?"

While Lancaster County abounds with pretzels of all sizes, shapes, and flavors, Clarence doesn't fear competition.

"You can taste the difference," he said. "I'm fully sold on my product."

So are many of his customers. One wrote, "Your pretzels are not the best in Pennsylvania — they're the best in the world."

According to Clarence, the taste difference does not depend on the ingredients but on the method.

"The only way to make a good pretzel is to hand roll it. The texture is different, the size is different, it tastes different," he said.

That is why an automated pretzel roller sits silently in the corner of the building.

Clarence points toward the machine and says, "With that, it only takes four people to do the work of 10, but the pretzels don't taste the same."

He wants to maintain the same flavor Martin's Pretzels had when the business was founded in the 1930s. That was when Clarence's Uncle Henry Martin purchased a pretzel recipe from a man in Reading. The uncle began making the pretzels in a shop in back of his Akron home. Eighteen years ago, the uncle sold the business to Clarence's brother, Lloyd, who operated it for 10 years before selling it to Clarence.

Lloyd had seven children who he wanted to raise on the farm. When he sold the business to Clarence, it was producing 800 pounds of pretzels daily. Now, Martin's makes 1,600 pounds daily.

Unlike many pretzels, Martin's have no shortening in them. Only flour, salt, and sour dough yeast are used.

"That makes them crunchier," Clarence said.

Customers who prefer crunchy pretzels send letters proclaiming their loyalty.

One wrote, "While eating a pretzel, I broke off part of a tooth filling. But I would still eat your pretzels even if I lost all my teeth."

Letters such as that cause Clarence to say, "Can you imagine how wonderful it is to have a business that spreads so much joy?"

It confirms that Clarence made the right decision eight years ago, when he left his 15-year career as a construction worker to purchase Martin's Pretzels from his brother.

"I like working with people and making pretzels a lot better than building houses," Clarence said.

Apparently his brother missed the pretzel business, because six years after he sold the business to Clarence, he opened up a pretzel company in New York. He uses the same recipe and also calls them Martin's Pretzels.

Another company in Lancaster County also uses the same recipe

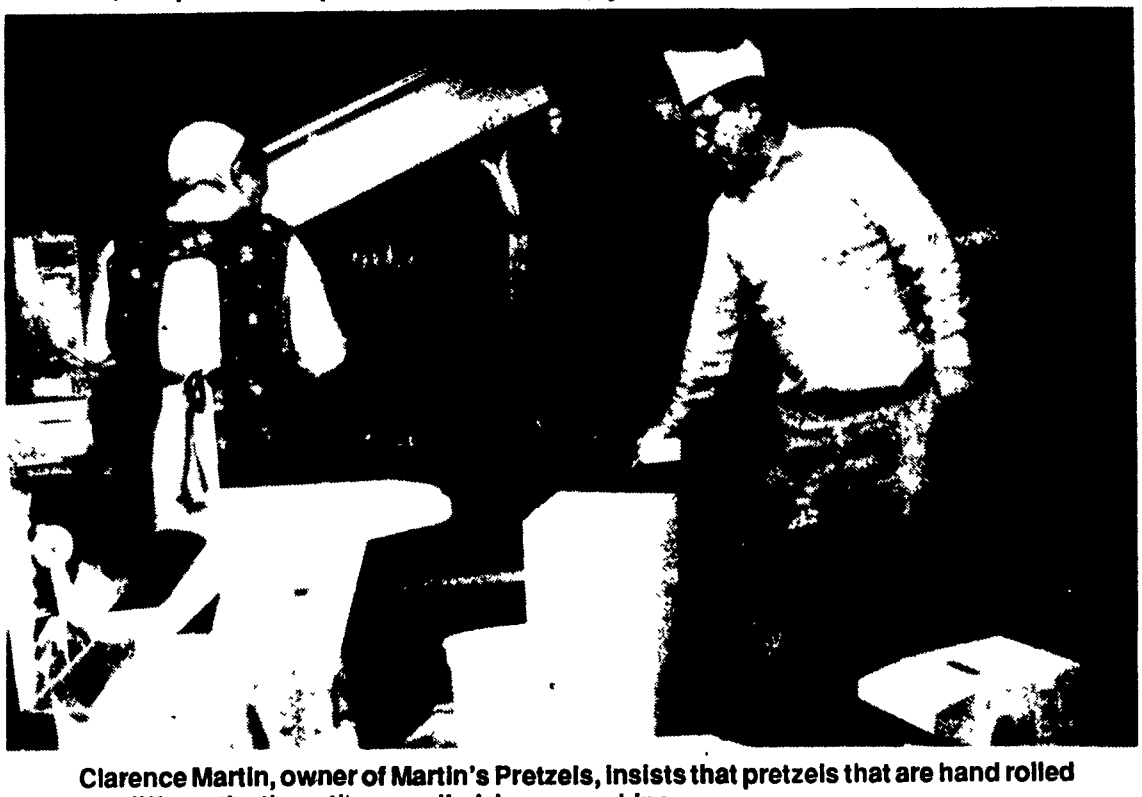
The voices and fingers of the assembly-line workers never miss a beat as they hand twist pretzels and sing their favorite songs.

The dough is fed into a hand cranked apparatus that cuts and shoots out uniform pieces of dough for the workers to twist into shape.

The freshly formed pretzels are left to rise before baking. About 1,600 pounds of pretzels are made daily.

Although he is 84-years- old, the father of Clarence Martin packs pretzels daily at the plant.



Clarence Martin, owner of Martin's Pretzels, insists that pretzels that are hand rolled taste differently than those rolled by a machine.

to manufacture pretzels.

Clarence laughs at the idea that those two manufacturers might be competition.

"There's room enough for all of us," Clarence said. "I'm as busy as I want here and I don't want to get bigger."

Ironically, even though the same recipe is used by the three manufacturers, Clarence said, "You can taste the difference."

According to him, flour from other areas produces a different-tasting pretzel and even the water used can make pretzels taste differently.

"Nothing like limestone water," he said.

About five tons of Snavely's unbleached flour are used weekly in the Akron plant.

Three varieties identified as regular hand-twisted, special handmade, and whole wheat are made. At one time, Martin's made cheese pretzels. "But we no longer have time to make them although some of our customers still beg us to make them," Clarence said.

Daily, about 1,400 pounds of the special handmade variety, dipped in lye for color and flavor, are produced.

The regular hand-twisted, which are light in color, are dipped in baking soda. About 200 pounds of the regular variety are made daily.

The whole wheat are also dipped in baking soda. About 200 pounds of these are made weekly.

For each batch of pretzels, 200 pounds of ingredients are mixed together for 10 minutes in a machine that resembles a cement mixer. The dough is left to rise for 30 minutes before being fed into a hand-cranked apparatus called a dough cutter, which cuts and shoots out uniform pieces of dough that the assembly line workers twist into pretzel shapes.

The twisted pretzels are placed on racks to double in size before being dipped in a solution of boiling water and lye or baking soda for 20 seconds, sprinkled with salt, and flipped into an oven where they are baked at 550 degrees for 10 minutes. The high temperatures crystallize the lye to make it inactive. When the pretzels are finished baking on the outside, a conveyor belt takes them through a dryer for one hour to finish the drying process on the inside of the pretzel.

The pretzels are packaged in cellophane bags. Clarence's 84-year-old father comes to work every day to pack the bags of pretzels in boxes ready for shipping.

Clarence eats pretzels every day. "I never get tired of them," he said.

He prefers the ones called special handmade, which the company began making in the 1950s. Although some people prefer the whole wheat, Clarence said that they are his least favorite because they are considered "healthier."

Martin's employs 30 people, who work in crews of 13. The average worker twists 10 pretzels a minute although, once in a race, a worker managed to make 20 in a minute.

Of the mostly conservative Mennonite employees, Clarence said, "We never advertise for help because we always have people that want to work here."

Clarence's daughter works in the plant and a son has a pretzel route, which stays within a 50-mile radius. Ten wholesale distributors take care of their own shipping.

"We don't have any trucks; we just sell," Clarence said. "We don't take new stores because we can't handle anymore. We don't want to work day and night."

The plant is open from 6 a.m. until 5 p.m. During the busy season — June through December — an evening shift works from 4 p.m. to 9 p.m. and on Saturday for three hours.

Martin's averages 40 walk-in customers daily. At the plant, customers may purchase first quality or broken pieces.

Tours are given whenever people request them. "People come from all over the world to watch us," Clarence said.

He has been asked to go to Singapore to set up a pretzel factory, but he declined.

"Pretzel baking depends a lot on the humidity. It takes less yeast when the weather is hot with high humidity. I'm not sure how pretzel making would work in Singapore," he said. "Besides, I'm busy enough here."

To order Martin's Pretzels by mail, send a check with your order and request a 3-pound package or 6 8-oz bags for $10. Make sure you request the variety wanted.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Hi there, old friend,

This is just a little note asking you to stop around and visit one of these first days.

Where've you been, anyway? Enjoying the beaches of the Bahamas? Surfing in Hawaii? Wintering in Florida? We've missed you; in fact, a bunch of us have been wondering if we did something to offend you.

Yeah, we know. There for awhile it seemed you had moved in permanently. Really put the heat on us while you were here. And we did considerable complaining about you. Wished we could replace you on numerous occasions.

But you didn't have to up and leave us completely. We really want you, need you, to remain a big part of our lives.

Fact is, we just absolutely can't live without you. But, look, we can't live without the "other guy" as well.

We need you both. What can we do to get you two to cooperate a little better?

If you recall, Sun, for several years there, you just took over. Ruled with an iron hand, day after searing day—for the better part of a decade, here in our neck of the woods. You ran good old Rain almost out of the country. Glared down on us with long, scorching stares that dried up water supplies, shriveled up crops, wilted gardens, and, by gosh, even cracked the very soil beneath us.

You certainly taught us a few things. We began practicing more conservation of our water resources. No doubt we should have been doing that already, but we humans are sometimes a wasteful lot.

We discovered we could drive cars that weren't spotlessly clean. Our lawns would survive without daily waterings. Many of us farmers began adapting cropping practices to include more drought-tolerant forage crops and grain crops that could produce with less moisture.

Then some months ago, Sun, you just lit on out of here with not even a goodbye. Turned us over to Rain, and his Fog and Drizzle gang.

It's been a change. Some hay laid so long in fields last summer it had to be chopped up and blown back on the ground just to get rid of the moldy mess. And late corn in a few fields never matured, but simply deteriorated to black, rotten ears before the ground hardened enough for the machines to go in to pick it.

Still, we don't want to complain. People and livestock have plenty to eat. Our streams and ground water levels certainly seem more stable. The little "crick" in the meadow has more gurgle than it has had for some years. We find a few springs returning to bubble up in places where they had previously dried up.

Still, we miss your cheerful addition to our days. We miss the pastel pinks, purples and oranges of the sunrises and the uplift of those first rays of sunshine bursting above the horizon.

The pond hasn't sparkled in days but just sort of sits there, gray and leaden looking. Mud has become an endless resource, if we could just figure out what for. Livestock pens are near impossible to keep dry with this constant gray mist in the air. And, boy, have the tow chains gotten good workouts lately.

You're especially missed in the greenhouse, where the plants are just moping along in a sort of dormant stage. A touch of your warming brightness would certainly perk 'em up.

When you stop by, remember not to scare off Rain again. In fact, we'd very much appreciate it if you two would have lunch together and work out some fair balance of your visiting time with us. Thanks for your consideration.

Missing You,
Dreary, Damp
and Dismal

To maintain a positive climate for beef, it's important to help children understand the importance farmers place on preserving precious natural resources. "Caretakers All," a new beef checkoff-sponsored education program, takes an aggressive role in shaping how children perceive livestock farming and each person's responsibility for maintaining the environment. The educational kit was recently offered to third and fourth grade teachers throughout Pennsylvania. The "Caretakers All" education kit is just part of a coordinated demand-building marketing program funded through the $1 per head beef checkoff program.

It's Done!

The past couple weeks I have been reminded how good it feels to actually get something done! Now that the holidays have passed and my schedule has slowed down a bit, I've begun to tackle some long-put-off projects around the house and at work.

The results? Well, I have a new arrangement of dried flowers proudly displayed in the living room. New shelving in the kitchen has reduced clutter in cupboards. "Draft dodgers" are now trying to hold heat in and keep cold air out of our home, and three gallons of paint patiently wait to be applied in the bathroom. (Not all projects are done. Judging from our past record, those cans could be there for awhile!)

I disciplined myself to make some phone calls regarding new program efforts here at the Cooperative Extension office. "Cold calls" are always difficult for me. But now I can say that the wheels are turning. I also had the pleasure of throwing away several "To Do" notes that have been stacked on my desk.

The secrets? Well, one you may not be able to duplicate-my husband has been out of town for more than two weeks. The other, you can practice! Each day I made a plan to address one specific project or part of a project. The goal-setting is important.

Just after the holidays, I made a list of things to be done including starting a file of tax forms and year-end summaries, undecorating the tree and taking it to the recycling center, writing thank you notes and exercising. Then I followed a basic set of steps that you can use to accomplish the tasks on your list.

- Prioritize the list. What is most important?
- Compare the list to your calendar and schedule. Select a time and date to work on one or two specific tasks. Remember, break down jobs into smaller, manageable parts. One evening shop for supplies or read instructions. Another time, prepare the work space.
- Vary your tasks. Do something outdoors or something active. Then tackle a job that takes reading or writing.
- Ask for cooperation from your family members. Who can help? Can someone else pick the children up from practice? Who can drive to town for the supplies? When do you want them to stay out of the room? Talk about the upcoming tasks in advance, if you need their help, AGREE on a time. Don't impose one.
- As you accomplish one task, take a second look at your list and schedule a working time for the next one, You do not need to begin immediately.
- Be patient with yourself and your limitations. There is no glory in pushing yourself to fulfill "Superwoman" or "Superman" images.

As I worked, I found it helpful to turn off the TV. For me, the TV was a distraction. I found myself lingering in front of it instead of working. But for balance, I did reward myself with breaks. Then I'd watch a favorite show or relax with a delayed serving of dessert.

By modeling this pattern of goal-setting, you are presenting a wonderful example for the children in your family. They each need to learn how to plan, prioritize, break tasks into smaller parts, and meet deadlines. Use these same steps as you guide them through completion of science fair displays, 4-H projects, music lessons, term papers and Shakespeare plays.

Just so you know that I'm human and you're normal too-I still have QUITE A FEW items on my list that are not yet accomplished! And several nights this past week, I postponed my planned project. But the secret of accomplishing goals is to be specific about your plan. Make it manageable, and have a deadline for completion.

It does feel good to say, "It's done!"

Newsletter Adapted For Children With Disabilities

NEWARK, DE — "Great Beginnings" is an age-keyed newsletter series that currently provides timely information to more than 2,000 Delaware parents of infants and toddlers. Produced by University of Delaware Cooperative Extension, the newsletter is under revision to meet the needs of families who have children with disabilities.

According to Dr. Patricia Tanner Nelson, Extension specialist for family and child development and editor of "Great Beginnings," the revised version of the newsletter will help all families understand the challenges of families who have children with disabilities. Nelson hopes others will recognize the importance of including these special families in their social support networks.

The specialist recently received a $50,000 grant from the Delaware Developmental Disabilities Council to revise the newsletter. Consultants for the publication include the University of Delaware's department of individual and family studies and the director of the Parent Information Center.

The research-based information in this series is being used statewide in projects that focus on preparing every child to succeed in school. These include the Governor's Readiness for Success Commission and the Governor's Commission on Families. Nelson has also received a grant from the Department of Health and Social Services to design a prototype portfolio of information to be given to all parents at the birth of their baby.

"Great Beginnings" has reached more than 9,000 Delaware families since its inception 13 years ago. The series was cited this year by the National Governors Association as a pacesetter in meeting the needs of changing American families.

Pizza Pizzazz

Teen-agers from coast to coast will unanimously agree — a weekend is not complete without a piping hot, cheese-ladened pizza.

In fact, more pizza is eaten on Saturday night than any other day of the week. Whether eaten on a date, ordered after a game, or baked as a midnight snack, pizza rates high as a favorite food. On an average, 22.5 pounds of pizza are consumed per person per year.

Not just weekend fare, pizza is also a top pick for quick and healthy weeknight menus. Whole grain pizza crust is a good source of complex carbohydrates, while meat and vegetable toppings provide protein, vitamins, and minerals. And, of course, the essential pizza ingredient — cheese — boosts calcium and protein.

Mellow mozzarella is a favorite pizza cheese; however, colby, cheddar, provolone and blue cheese make great toppers, too. For extra flavor, a combination of cheeses is sure to please. Try pairing Monterey Jack with parmesan or extra sharp cheddar with romano.

For a made-to-order pizza that's ready in minutes, use your imagination to combine on-hand ingredients. Top anything from a rice cake to a toasted English muffin half with pizza toppings.

BLT POCKET PIZZA

4 slices bacon
1 whole wheat pita bread, 6-inches in diameter
Shredded iceberg lettuce
2 large tomato slices, each cut in half
2 tablespoons chili sauce, divided
½ cup shredded mozzarella cheese, divided

To cook bacon, place three thicknesses of paper toweling on paper plate. Arrange bacon on paper towel. Cover with another paper towel. Microwave on high for 3 to 4 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes. Place bacon on paper toweling to cool, about 5 minutes longer. Crumble bacon; set aside.

Cut pita bread in half vertically. Carefully open pocket. Place a small amount of lettuce and 2 tomato halves in each pocket. Spread top of each half of pita bread with 1 tablespoon chili sauce. Top each with half the crumbled bacon and half the cheese. Place both pita halves on a microwaveable plate. Microwave, uncovered, on high 1½ to 2 minutes, turning once. Serve immediately.

CRAZY CRUST PIZZA

1½ pounds ground beef
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon oregano
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 eggs
⅔ cup milk
¼ cup chopped onion
4 ounces well-drained mushrooms, optional
1 cup pizza sauce
1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese

In a medium skillet, brown beef and seasonings to taste. Drain well. Lightly grease and flour 12- or 14-inch pizza pan. Prepare batter. In small bowl, combine flour, salt, oregano, eggs, and milk. Mix until smooth. Pour batter into pan, tilting pan so batter covers the bottom. Arrange meat, onion, and mushrooms over batter. Bake on low rack in oven at 425 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes or until browned. Remove from oven. Drizzle with sauce and sprinkle with cheese. Return to oven for 10 to 15 minutes.

For a 13x9-inch pan, use the following measurements:

¾ cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon oregano
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 egg
⅔ cup milk
¾ pound ground beef
½ cup pepperoni
2 tablespoons onion
4 ounces canned mushroom, drained
⅔ cup pizza sauce
½ cup mozzarella cheese

BREAKFAST PIZZA

4 eggs
2 tablespoons milk
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1 tablespoon butter
4 slices of hot toast
4 tablespoons catsup or pizza sauce
⅓ cup shredded cheese

Mix eggs, milk, salt, and pepper with rotary beater. Melt butter in a skillet. Pour egg mixture and cook over low heat. Cook until eggs are thickened but still moist. Stir gently. Spread catsup on hot toast. Place toast on baking sheet and spoon scrambled eggs onto each piece. Sprinkle cheese on top of eggs. Place under broiler until cheese melts.

Speed scratch cooking is just the ticket when everyone needs a quick break and a nutritious refueling because it pairs convenience products with scratch ingredients. The convenience products are the likes of corn muffin mix, instant pudding, prepared spaghetti sauce, refrigerated pie crust, and shredded cheese. The scratch items include the meat or poultry, vegetables and/or fruits you add to the convenience products for a homemade taste.

The following ideas illustrate how fast and fun speed scratch cooking can be.

- Shape and bake meatballs; add to purchased spaghetti sauce jazzed up with grated Parmesan cheese. Serve in a pasta nest (gently pack cooked spaghetti in a buttered ring mold; unmold).
- Layer thinly sliced deli ham, sliced Swiss cheese, chopped green onion and red bell pepper on one-half of a refrigerated pie crust that has been lightly spread from dijon-style mustard; fold pie crust envelope-style, crimping edges with fork to seal. Bake according to package directions until golden brown.
- Prepare instant pudding mix with milk according to package directions; layer in dessert dishes with fresh fruit and cubes of store-bought angel food or pound cake.
- Add cubes of avocado, chopped cilantro, shredded Monterey Jack cheese and leftover cooked chicken to drained canned black beans; toss with prepared salsa and serve over salad greens.

Help Your Children Wake Up To Good Nutrition

Making sure your children get a healthy start — is it breakfast or battle?

If your answer is the latter, here is some practical advice for encouraging your youngsters to eat a breakfast that will provide the energy they need to take them through a busy morning. Keep a variety of healthy foods available and within easy reach of the young ones. If nutritious choices are handy, children are more likely to eat a good breakfast — even when you are not around. Include cereals, low-fat milk, fresh frutit, bagels and frozen waffles among the available foods in your pantry. Busy parents do not need to spend a great deal of time preparing breakfast for their children. A nourishing, low-fat meal can be pulled together in a matter of minutes. If "morning rush" is common in your home, just set the table the night before. This will help eliminate the "I don't have time, I'm going to miss the bus" comments. Ready-to-eat cereal, when served with low-fat milk, fruit or juice, toast or a muffin is a nutrient-packed meal that can be ready in less than five minutes.

. If you are having difficulty cutting back on the amount of fat in your family's diet, read the following tips to help you get into the low-fat breakfast habit:

Choose low-fat and fat-free breakfast cereals. You will find this information on the label. There are a number of low-fat brands available.

Use skim milk or low-fat milk instead of whole or 2% milk. While 2% milk has had some fat removed, low-fat (1%) or skim milk is a much better choice.

Try one of the new fat and cholesterol free frozen waffles on the market. Top them with lite syrup, fresh fruit, cinnamon, sliced backed apples or fruited non-fat yogurt.

Include seasonal fruits whenever you can to add fiber, vitamins, minerals, great taste and variety to breakfast, Berries, peaches, nectarines, bananas, apples, oranges and grapefruit are just some of the possibilities.

Dried fruit is also a great addition to breakfast and it is available year-round. Try dried pineapple, papaya, apples, raisins, dates and prunes. Eat them alone or add them to your cereal.

Save fat calories by using fruit jams (made without sugar) or fat-free cream cheese on toast, English muffins and bagels instead of butter, margarine and cream cheese.

Bake muffins using the recipes on the side panels of high-fiber cereal boxes and freeze them. Then take muffins out the night before to thaw, and you will have a great tasting and nutritious muffin the next morning. Use the recipe below to get you started.

Healthy Bran Muffins

1-¼ cups all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoon sugar
1-½ cups all-bran cereal
1-¼ cups skim milk
2 egg whites
1 tablespoon vegetable oil

Stir together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Set aside. Measure cereal and milk into large mixing bowl. Stir to combine. Let stand one to two minutes or until cereal softens. Add egg whites and oil. Beat well. Add flour mixture, stirring only until combined. Portion batter evenly into 12 lightly greased 2-1/2 inch muffin-pan cups. Bake at 400 degrees F about 18 minutes or until lightly browned. Yield: 12 muffins. Per serving, 1 muffin: calories 100; total fat 2 g.; saturated fat 0 g.; Cholesterol 0 mg; dietary fiber 4 g.

Pork Ad Wins Award

CHICAGO, Ill. — The American Dietetic Association presented the pork industry's 31% Leaner advertisement its "Advertising Accomplishment Award" for outstanding scores in its latest readership test.

The checkoff-funded ad, developed by the Pork Industry Group for the National Pork Board, scored 65% in the September Journal of the American Dietetic Association READEX study, placing it in second place in the foods category. Of all 38 ads in the test, the 31 Leaner ad placed third.

The READEX study is conducted by sending out issues of the journal and asking dietitians to score the ads that they found of interest. Scores represent the percentage of readers who found the ad of interest.

"We thought we had a winner when this ad was developed because of its news-worthiness and high relevance to the dietitian. Considering that the ad has been in the journal since April 1991, I am very pleasesd that it remains a top-read ad," says Sharlet Brown, director of communications for the Pork Industry Group.

Brown attributes the success of the ad to thorough testing prior to development and the knowledge gained by the Meat Board about this audience through years of programs.

The ad focuses on fresh pork's official new nutrient profile, proving that it has 31 percent less fat, 14 percent less calories and 10 percent less cholesterol than in the 1983 official data.

The Journal of the American Dietetic Association is the most widely-read professional publication by dietitians, with 91 percent saying they ready it regularly.

The Pork Industry Group, a division of the National Livestock and Meat Board, conducts demand-building information and research programs. Funding is from producer checkoffs from the National Pork Board, packers and processors.

ANSWER — Jennifer Rake, East Stroudsburg, wanted to know how and when to harvest dry soybeans and how to roast them. Thanks to an anonymous reader for sending the following information. She writes that soybeans should be planted in May. After pods are completely filled out, pull out plants, tie together and hang to dry.

Soybean Nuts

Rinse and drain soybeans (1 cup raw soybeans expands to about 2½ cups after soaking). Soak overnight, using 3 cups cold water for each cup soybeans. If you're in a hurry, use the fast-soak method: Bring soybeans and water to a boil: boil 2 minutes and let stand 1 to 2 hours.

Drain soybeans; dry thoroughly by wrapping them in a towel. Roast them with either of the following methods. Be careful not to overcook as they continue browning after both baking and microwaving. After cooking, sprinkle soybeans with salt or other seasonings, if desired. Spread on paper towels to drain and cool. Store tightly covered in a cool place.

Conventional oven: This method is easiest for a large amount. Stir together soaked soybeans and 1 teaspoon soybean oil (for each cup soaked soybeans) on a large cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 to 60 minutes, stirring after each 15 minutes or until soybeans are light golden brown.

Microwave oven: Roast no more than 2 cups at a time. Stop and let your microwave cool before cooking additional batches. For 2 cups of soaked soybeans; combine soybeans with 1 teaspoon soybean oil in a microwavable and heat-proof glass 9- or 10-inch pie plate. Microwave (HIGH), uncovered, 10 to 12 minutes, stirring after each 2 minutes or until soybeans look slightly browned.

Group members are asked to bring food items for the Greater Berks Food Bank to meetings before March so each group president can bring it to the March board meeting. Our goal for food donations this year is 1,000 pounds.

State president Arlene Witman's heifer project was discussed with ideas of each group doing fund raising projects to raise money for their contributions for this project.

Plans for a county money maker are the possibilities of a quilt, plus other items from each group, with tickets being sold and winners selected at the Berks County convention. County convention will be held October 2, at the Agriculture building.

Lancaster Society 19

Lancaster County Farm Women's Society #19 met at the home of Beth Dum on January 9.

Each member brought a sandwich to exchange and share lunch.

The next meeting will be held February 13, at the home of June Bare.

Lancaster Society 1

The Lancaster County Society of Farm Women 1 held their January meeting in the Lititz Historical Foundation Building. The program for the day was the Mueller House, which is part of the Foundation.

Prior to the business session members toured the museum. It contained a great deal of information about the early settlers of Lititz, going back to the 1700s. Many of them were Moravians, who were also the founders of the Moravian Church in Lititz. There were also various items and artifacts on display in the museum.

Hostesses for the meeting were Viola Wolf and Fay Garman, who also served refreshments.

The business session was called to order by President Fay Garman who welcomed members and guests. Julia Zahn led members in singing two songs.

For devotions, Betty Shaeffer read an article written by a World War II soldier and the first chapter from the book of Psalms.

Members were to answer roll call by naming the Lititz area that they thought was the most picturesque. Seventeen members and one guest were present.

Corresponding Secretary Harriet Fasnacht read a "Thank You" for the gift given by the Society in memory of Barbara Musser, who had been a charter member of Society 1 and a "Thank You" from Dorothy Hollinger for a get well gift.

Betty Sheaffer reported that the February meeting will be held in her home on Feb. 6. Speaker will be Mr. Weinhold who is a geneologist. Margaret Bucher, for the Ways and Means Committee, stated they are planning several trips for this year. For the Sunshine Committee, Sarah Weber reported their visitations.

President Fay Garman read a letter from Julia Zahn, thanking members for their help and support during her presidency and especially during the 75th anniversary celebration.

Julia Zahn read some of the many letters of remembrance that she had received from former members, during the Society's 75th anniversary.

The meeting adjourned with President Garman sharing a poem entitled "The Gifted Years" and members singing the Society song, "Brighten the Corner."

Fourth Grader Writes About 'Farmer Grandpa'

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — The purpose of promoting good relationships between all ages inspired the Mifflin-Juniata Area Agency on Aging to again offer, for the sixth time, its annual "My Special Senior Friend" essay contest. A teacher, in turn, inspired Andrew Yoder to write about his special senior friend — his "Pap" Joshua Yoder.

A fourth grader at Belleville Mennonite School, Andrew wrote his essay because he wanted everyone to know that his grandfather is "a nice person to be around".

"I picked him because I like to do activities with him and to go to his house," Andrew said.

And as "Farmer Grandpa," as Andrew sometimes calls him, Josh provides for Andrew and his six other grandchildren, lots of chances to learn while doing.

"I've learned how to drive a tractor and feed cows," says Andrew, who wants to be a farmer when he grows up.

While Andrew's uncle Marvin milks the 55-cow herd on the home farm near Belleville, Josh takes care of the 120 crop acres, tends to heifers at different locations, and calls his grandchildren to ride along and help out.

And, as Andrew's essay explains, his grandfather does a lot, lot more.

My special senior friend is a very busy person. He hauls sawdust for people and lets me ride along. He goes to a lot of sales. He hauls cows and other animals for people who buy them at the sales. I like to ride with him in his cattle truck. He lets me help load and unload the animals. I like to watch the sales with him. He usually buys me candy bars and soda. One time he tried to trick me into buying a litter of pigs. I was glad I didn't have to pay for them!

Whenever he doesn't go to sales he does the farmwork on a farm. I like to ride with him in the tractor. Last year I helped unload hay. It was a heavy job but I like working with hay. He also raises a few calves. He helps clean up after fires. He goes to church every Sunday. I like to visit him because I like to feed his calves. I am very glad he's my friend. I like him a lot.

by Andrew Yoder

Joshua learned of Andrew's entry in the contest a few weeks before he submitted his entry. Then, after reading the entry and attending the honors celebration for entry winners, Josh discovered he learned a few things from Andrew!

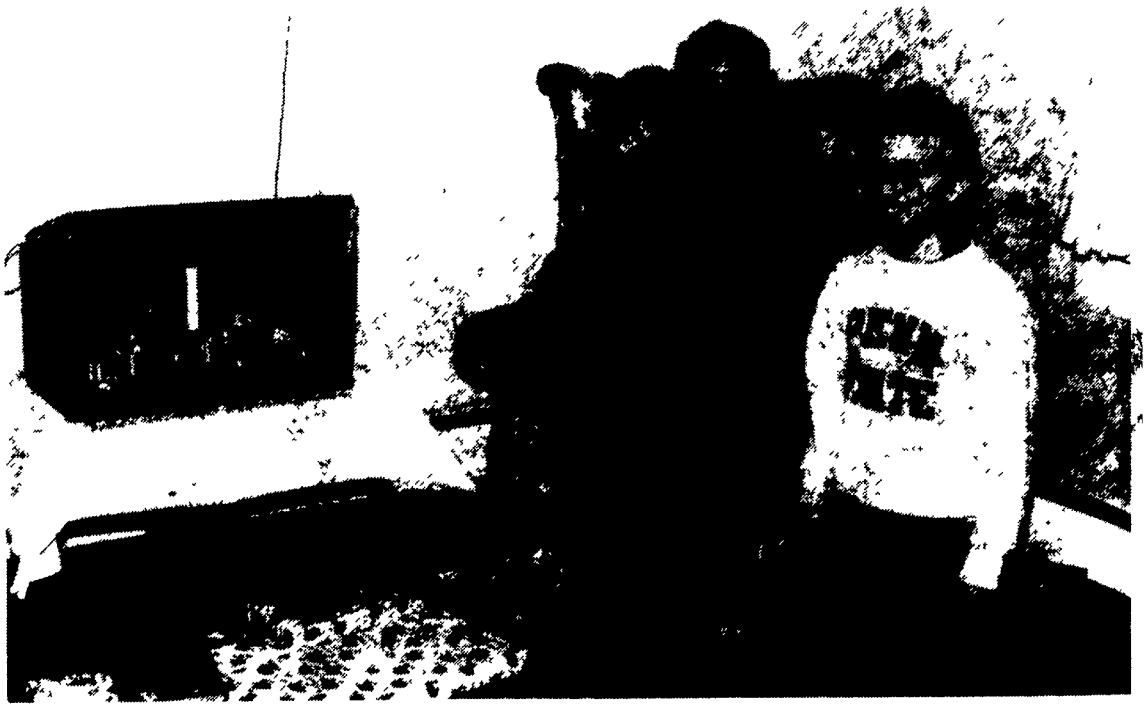
"I learned how close they (grandchildren) were watching me. It came out in Andrew's essay. Andrew mentioned that I was always in church every Sunday. It made me aware that kids watch grandparents as much as parents," Josh explained.

And with little eyes watching, Josh hopes to instill the same values he taught his own six children — to go to church on Sunday, and to teach them the value of work, of getting something done, of getting something accomplished.

While Andrew made his Pap feel surprised, happy, and honored by writing his essay, both are partners in the process of keeping families close, of promoting good relationships between all ages.

Andrew's parents are Wayne and Sandy Yoder of Belleville.

Andrew Yoder chose Pap as his "Special Senior Friend."



Through Andrew's entry in "My Special Senior Friend Contest," Joshua learned how closely children watch their grandparents.

Steak Houses Gain Popularity

CHICAGO, Ill. — Media coverage for the beef industry is sizzling these days, as major publications document increased consumer interest in steak chains. The thrust of coverage is a 5 percent traffic increase at casual, mid-scale steakhouses in 1992 — a time during which sluggish sales were the norm throughout most of the foodservice industry.

According to esteemed publications such as the Wall Street Journal, a current rage for steak is fueled by diners who are eating more moderate portions of beef at home, but who want to splurge on juicy steaks at restaurants. Furthermore, steakhouses offer 30- and 40-year old patrons the meat-and-potatoes meals they grew up with and a decor that appeals to a growing consumer interest in the country-western lifestyle.

The Beef Industry Council (BIC) is now planning to build on these figures and trends by featuring these steak chains in advertisements placed in prominent foodservice trade publications.

Some new steakhouses have enjoyed significant growth over the past year, including Tampa-based Outback Steakhouse, Inc., Atlanta-based Longhorn Steaks and Wichita's Lonestar Steakhouse and Saloon, Inc. - all of which went public this year. The Journal reports that each of these venues regularly has a two-hour wait at the door, and each plans to open 20 to 60 new outlets in 1993.

This success is inspiring some long-standing steak chains to revamp their marketing strategies and update their decor, according to the Journal. These include Metromedia Steakhouses, Inc. (responsible for the Ponderosa and Bonanza chains), Steak & Ale and Sizzler.

Such national media coverage has increased consumer awareness of steak's role in contemporary dining, according to Larry Oltjen, Kansas beef producer and chairman of the Beef Industry Council (BIC) Foodservice Subcommittee.

"These articles fill an important, objective niche in placing steakhouses within current dining trends," Oltjen says. "New steakhouses differ from the past in that they offer a wider range of flavor profiles, such as Cajun or Mexican-style steaks. They also offer a variety in portion size, which appeals to a broader range of customers. And, finally, they provide a perceived value that is critical in today's consumer climate."

Attesting to steak's popularity from a trade perspective, Nation's Restaurant News and other foodservice publications also have also featured the success of steak chains. In addition to the segment's 5 percent traffic increase, a 1992 foodservice market survey by Consumer Research on Eating Share Trends (CREST) notes a 5 percent 1991-92 rise in sales for upscale steakhouses versus an average 0.6 percent sales decline for other upscale outlets.

"These recent, major articles are helpful in lending a third-party credibility to the growing profitability of beef," says Maureen Lambe, BIC director of foodservice programs. "Articles about the increasing popularity of steakhouses help restaurant operators realize that a lot of people are making money selling beef."

Beef foodservice programs are checkoff-funded promotion programs managed on behalf of the beef industry by the Beef Industry Council of the National Livestock and Meat Board. The Beef Industry Council is a federation of 44 state beef councils that work to build demand through programs of promotion, research and information.

Berks Society 4

Berks County Society of Farm Women Group 4 met at the Bechtelsville home of Charlotte Mauger with five members and a guest, Joyce Greenman, present.

President Mary Fizz reported all groups were asked to help in a raffle as a fund raiser for the county. An item of canned or packaged food is needed for Ag Days to be given to the Reading area food pantry.

By-laws and rules were read and discussed during the social hour.

The next meeting will be a Valentine party at the home of Evelyn Becker in Boyerstown on February 2. A $2 gift will be exchanged. Red must be worn or pay a fine. A red food item is to brought by each member for refreshments.

Calcium Linked To Controlling, Preventing Hypertension

KINGSTON, N.Y. — Good news linking calcium consumption to hypertension prevention is spreading to consumers through the efforts of American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC), Mid East United Dairy Industry Association/F.O. 36 Agency (Mid East UDIA) and Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program (PDPP). The promotion agencies extended a national media campaign organized by UDIA to spread the word about a new report reaffirming calcium's important role in the diet.

The National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute's Report on Detection, Evaluation and Treatment of High Blood Pressure, released in late October, points to diet as a controllable factor in the prevention and treatment of high blood pressure.

The report recommends that people get adequate calcium, magnesium and potassium in their diets — nutrients found individually in many foods, but together in meaningful quantities only in dairy products.

"The key message is that if you are not eating the right foods to meet your RDA of these important minerals, now is the time to start," said David McCarron, M.D., spokesperson for the media campaign from Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland — the leading medical center exploring the link between calcium and hypertension.

McCarron helped spread the word that dairy products are naturally rich in these essential nutrients as the main objective of the campaign. News releases sent to consumer media by ADADC, Mid East UDIA and PDPP quoted McCarron's recommendations and gave consumers tips on increasing dietary calcium. A recent presentation by McCarron at the American Heart Association annual meeting in November spread the word to health professionals. This was followed by satellite media interviews with news stations around the country, including the Scranton/Wilkes-Barre market. The three promotion groups helped coordinate the interviews, and arranged local interviews by area dietitians in Pennsylvania's major markets.

In coming months the promotion groups will extend the hypertension/dairy story further with feature articles and recipes for the news media, and information to health professionals.

"Most Americans don't get enough calcium, magnesium and potassium," said Peggy Pettingell, nutrition education director for Dairy Council. "They can turn to dairy products for an easy and delicious source of these nutrients.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — Sonja Zehr, Croghan, N.Y. would like a recipe for cinnamon (hard candy coated) apples. Thanks to Tammie Godfrey, Felton, for sending a recipe.

Candy Apples

2 cups sugar
1 cup Karo syrup
½ cup water
¼ cup red cinnamon candies
10 drops red food coloring
8 apples and sticks

In a 2-quart saucepan, mix sugar, Karo, and water. Boil, stirring constantly, to 250 degrees; add candies and cook to 285 degrees. Remove from stove, stir in food coloring. Twirl apples in syrup. If desired, roll in nuts or coconut.

ANSWER — Georgia Bond wanted a recipe for chicken pot pie. Thanks to Lois Matter, Millersburg, for sending one. For those interested, a chicken pot-pie cook-off will be held February 15, at Lancaster. For more information, call 1-800-735-2629 extension 2322 or write to the Pennsylvania Dutch Convention & Visitors Bureau, Dept. 2322, 501 Greenfield Rd., Lancaster, PA 17601.

Chicken Pot Pie

2 eggs
4 tablespoons milk
Flour to thicken
Pinch salt
1 stewing chicken

Beat eggs, add milk, salt, and flour until stiff enough to roll. Cut in 2-inch squares. Peel and cut about 4 or 5 medium-sized potatoes into four pieces.

After boiling the chicken, remove it from the broth. Add enough water to the broth to make about 3 cups liquid.

Bring liquid to a rapid boil, lay one half of the potatoes in the bottom of the pot of boiling liquid and one layer of the dough; repeat. If more liquid is needed, add more water.

Sprinkle with parsley and onion, if desired. Cook, covered, until potatoes are soft. Stir from time to time.

If desired, substitute beef or ham for the chicken.

ANSWER — William Mende, Elizabethville, wanted a recipe for Kielbasa that tastes like that sold by Hillshire Farms, and a recipe for a German Bratwurst (pork sausage) cured and cold-smoked but ready-to-eat, and made with caraway seed, pepper, and garlic. Also wanted a creamy, not grainy, liverwurst recipe, a mettwurst recipe, and blutwurst recipe. These are German sausage recipes that William remembers from his youth of 40 years ago. Here are some sausage, Kielbasa, and Bratwurst recipes that readers sent in. However, we did not receive recipes for liverwurst, mettwurst, and blutwurst. If you have them, please send them.

Fresh Polish Sausage (Kielbasa)

5 tablespoons salt
1 tablespoon sugar
2 large cloves
Fresh garlic
1 tablespoon coarse black pepper
1 heaping teaspoon marjoram
1 pint ice water
10 pounds boneless pork butts

Grind the pork butts through a ¼ -⅜ /8-inch grinder plate and place in the mixer. Add the remaining ingredients and mix well until all the spices are evenly distributed. Deliver to the stuffer using 35 to 38mm hog casing. Hang on smokesticks spaced properly and let dry in cooler.

Be sure that meat has been chilled between 32 to 34 degrees before starting.

All blood clots, bones, cords, and so forth must be removed and thrown out. Do not keep sausage at room temperature any longer than necessary.

As with the grinding of meat and its size, there also are no set rules as to the type of meat that a person should use in making sausage; that includes the fresh, smoked, dry or semi-dry types. Any combination of meat can be used. The most important thing is the spices and seasonings used to give sausage its identity.

Contributor writes that there is so much to learn about sausage making and how to make it safe to eat. For that reason, she recommends buying Great Sausage Recipes and Meat Curing by Rytek Kutas. For more information on sausage making or to order the book, write to The Sausage Maker Inc., 177 Military Rd., Buffalo, NY 14207.

Viewers Respond To Commercials

CHICAGO, Il. — During one 24-hour period last fall, telephones at the Minnesota Beef Council were ringing off the hook. More than 600 consumers, responding to a Minneapolis television news report, were calling to request copies of the Beef Industry Council (BIC) educational booklet, "Food Guide for the First Five Years." This TV report was no accident — the station was targeted by the BIC News Bureau as a key outlet to air positive publicity for the beef industry.

Such coverage is not limited to Minnesota — it is disseminated by key broadcast and print media outlets across the country. This strategy helps News Bureau reach 90 percent of its target audience of "convenience-oriented" and "new traditionalist" consumers.

"This program allows us to generate good news about beef and checkoff-funded programs in the consumer media," says Harlan Huffman, chairman of the Beef Public Relations subcommittee.

A major goal of News Bureau is to maintain an ongoing media relations program that delivers accurate information to health and nutrition media in 31 key cities around the country, Huffman explains. The outreach is then extended by state beef councils to other media outlets in their respective states, he adds.

News Bureau mailings have included the "Meat and Health Reference kit," the "Food Guide Pyramid Poster and Fact Sheet", releases on beef industry partnerships with leading health organizations and a sample copy of Food and Nutrition News, a nutrition newsletter published monthly by the National Livestock and Meat Board.

Food Packaging: A Futuristic Science

NEWARK, DE — You don't have to embark on the starship Enterprise to go places no one's ever been before, says University of Delaware food science researcher Dr. James Paik. His quest of fundamental chemical principles that apply to food packaging takes him to research territory still unexplored by the scientific community in its search for improved technology.

Paik, who has a biochemical and food engineering background, sees foods from a different perspective. An orange is just a group of chemicals, and milk is lipids suspended in a protein solution. His involvement in chemistry has led him to examine fundamental principles that can be applied to these groups of chemicals that we call food and their interaction with other chemicals we call packaging.

When defining his research goals at the department of food science, Paik tries to look to future needs.

Over the past four years, Paik has focused on the area of flavor scalping. For example, when tetra packs were first introduced, the aroma from orange juice was scalped, or absorbed, by the plastics of the inner liner. Food scientists are now looking for inexpensive plastic linings that won't scalp the flavor from citrus juices.

The scientist is interested in exploring other research areas including smart packaging. Smart packages do more than just keep food in and elements out. A smart package could be made with material that kills microbes without adding harmful chemicals to foods, thus keeping spoilage organisms at bay in processed foods such as bacon.

In the future, smart packages may be able to tell sellers and consumers when a product has gone bad. As technology progresses, a chemically sensitive patch on the package could indicate, perhaps with a color change, the presence of chemicals produced by spoiling food or bacteria.

"To meet future needs, we should be looking to keep refrigerated, ready-to-eat food products for at least a month from the manufacturing process to consumer use," Paik says.

Cook's Question

Klobasy Sausage

5 pounds pork butts
2 pieces garlic, chopped fine
2 tablespoons salt
1 teaspoon pepper
Casing enough to use prepared meat

Grind meat in a coarse grinder and mix well with other ingredients. Stuff casings with meat mixture. Put in smoke house and smoke daily for about a week, using apple wood.

Jo Matenus
Dallas

German Bratwurst

4½ pounds pork butt or shoulder or deboned spareribs
½ pound lean veal
If necessary, enough fat to make the 2-to-1 ratio
½ teaspoon marjoram, crushed
½ teaspoon caraway seeds, crushed
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
2 teaspoons salt
¾ teaspoon pepper
Cold water
Natural or cheesecloth casings

Cut the meats and fat into chunks; chill and grind them together twice, using the fine blade of a meat grinder; if hand chopping, make ⅛ -inch bits; if processor grinding, whirl until smooth but not pureed. Combine the marjoram, caraway, and nutmeg in a mortar and pestle or in a blender; crush them to a powder, then mix in the salt and pepper. Add the spice mixture to ⅓ cup cold water; knead the spiced water into the sausage meat, adding more water to make a soft sticky mixture. Stuff sausage meat into casings. Ripen the sausages, well wrapped, in your refrigerator for 1 to 2 days in order to blend the seasonings. To cook whole: prick them well with a fork and simmer in wine, broth, beer, or water for about 40 minutes. After simmering brown them under a broiler or on a grill or cut them into thick, diagonal slices and fry.

To freeze uncooked or simmered sausages for future use, skip the ripening period. Thaw before cooking. Never cook unthawed sausages as they will burst.

Draft Horse Queen Overcomes Handicaps From Childhood Injury

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

FISHERTOWN (Bedford Co.) — Beverly Oldham, Bedford County Draft Horse Queen, considers herself quite lucky to be alive.

At the age of 11, she was riding a bicycle near her home with a friend. "We were kids," she remembers, "And, we really weren't watching what we were doing."

Suddenly, on this peaceful summer day, Beverly was struck by a car and hurled from her bicycle onto the roadway.

She suffered head trauma, four broken ribs, a broken jaw, and was paralyzed on her left side for three weeks.

"They tell me I was in a coma for three weeks," this spunky young lady says now.

In order for her to breathe, it was necessary to do a tracheotomy in her neck.

Three major operations, and much therapy later, Beverly still has an airway that is 2/3 the normal size.

Because doctors were forced to tie up one of her vocal cords, Beverly will never be able to speak loudly.

It's a slight handicap that is hardly noticed. The softness of her voice goes with her gentle personality.

"At one time, I didn't think anything would ever turn out alright," admits Beverly. She had little chance for a social life between major operations. Her education was obtained through home schooling.

However, on Christmas day, she became engaged to Tom Sauter, a young man who considers himself very lucky to have found Beverly.

Both now share a mutual interest in draft horses.

"Prior to knowing Beverly, I didn't really know anything about draft horses," admits Tom.

It was in the summer of 1992 that the Bedford County Draft Horse Association, headed by Fred and Linda Sell, decided to elect a queen.

"Beverly was our unanimous choice," Fred says.

Beverly and her draft horse on the Oldham farm.

The Bedford County Draft Horse Association has between 15 and 20 members all owning anywhere from one to 15 draft horses.

Beverly lives on an 84-acre farm where her father has 15 head, which he raises and sells to Amish and Mennonite farmers.

"We also use them for our own farm work," says Russell Oldham. "We rake our hay with them and do some of the other field work."

Beverly does the stable work such as feeding, bedding, and brushing.

Beverly also owns a six-year-old Haflinger Stallion Paint Pony.

Her responsibilities as Bedford County's queen include helping to obtain funding for the Draft Horse barn and show which has become an annual part of the Bedford County Fair.

"I spoke to the Rotary Club at a recent meeting," she smiles and admits this was not an easy task for a young lady who has difficulty talking.

Beverly also gives out ribbons at the Draft Horse show at the fair.

She participated in three parades and three dinners at the 1992 Fall Foliage event in Bedford.

"We're proud to have Beverly representing our association," Fred Sells says. "And, we are so happy that things are at last going in the right direction for this deserving young woman."

National Goat Representative Promotes Industry

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

CHALFONT (Bucks Co.) — Seventeen-year-old Paul Plummer is the National Goat Representative. Paul considers himself a natural spokesperson for the industry because he grew up with goats.

He said, "My family has raised them for 23 years. When I was 8 years old, I started showing goats, and by the time I was 11, I was showing semiprofessionally."

Paul and his parents, Dr. John and Maxine Plummer, and his sister, Amy, have 25 to 30 Toggenburg goats that they show across the U.S.

"Mom, Amy, and I leave the day school is over and return about two days before it begins again," Paul said. His dad, who teaches at Delaware Valley College, remains at home to feed the remaining goat herd and Jersey calves, but will often join the family for weekend shows.

According to Paul, the Toggenburg breed are medium-sized and docile tempered. The breed originated in the Swiss Alps in an area called Toggenburg. The markings of purebred Toggenburgs may be any shade of brown with white on the face, around the legs, and in the diaper area. Toggenburgs have erect ears and look similar to deer.

Paul's parents became interested in raising goats in a round about way. When they first purchased their Chalfont farm, it was zoned agriculture. The real estate agent suggested that the Plummers immediately buy at least one farm animal to insure that the property remain zoned for agriculture.

"I wanted to buy a horse," Mrs. Plummer said, "but we didn't have much time, so we quickly purchased a goat."

The Plummers planned to sell the goat as soon as they purchased a horse.

Instead, they fell in love with the playful antics of the goat and continued bo purchase more. "We never did buy a horse," Mrs. Plummer said.

The Plummers also raise Jersey calves, which are bottle-fed goat's milk.

"We think calves do better on goat's milk," Paul said. "They are larger and tend to have healthier hair coats than calves fed in other ways."

Before Paul took over national responsibilities for the goat industry, he was named Pennsylvania Goat Representative. During the American Goat Association pageant held in Massachuttes, he competed with representatives from other states to achieve the national title. The competition included a 15-minute oral speech, an impromtu questioning session, and a personal interview with judges.

"I want to do my part to represent the goat industry. The public has many misconceptions about goats that I want to correct," Paul said.

One particular pet peeve of his is the commonly held belief that goats eat tin cans.

"They don't," he said.

Paul plans a career in vet research. Already he has gained experience in scientific research. For the past five years, his continuation of a science fair project has dealt with goat colostrum and a virus often transmitted to the offspring. Currently, heat treament will kill the virus, but it also kills the antibodies in the colostrum. Paul's project examines other methods of solving the problem. His project has enabled him to advance to the International Science and Engineering Fair. Three years ago, Paul placed third in medicine and health, and for the past two years, in the zoology division.

Paul claims that he has no other choice than to become a scientist.

"I always tell people that both my mother and father are scientists so I was bred to be a scientist," he joked.

Paul, his sister, and mother show mostly in a tri-state area, but they travel to many other states. Sometimes this means shipping the goats by air.

"In the eastern U.S., there may be more goats, but the ratio of people to goats, I would say, is similar throughout the area," Paul said.

In the East, competitive breeds include Nubian, Alpine, and Toggenburg. Nubians are more popular in the West.

The Plummer family raise about 30 Toggenburg goats that they show across the U.S. In front are Amy and Paul with their parents, Dr. John and Maxine Plummer.

When choosing a breed, Paul said, a person should be within driving distance of a buck.

The Plummers breed goats about 50 percent of the time with AI services and the other times with their own bucks.

Each year the ADGA indexes all animals, appraises and classifies milk records. In choosing the stud, the Plummers analyze their herd for what they believe is the biggest concern and look for that trait in a buck.

"At shows, we search for bucks with genetics that we would like to have in our own herd," he said.

The Plummers market their own goats.

In showing, Paul shows the herd classified as American Toggenburgs and his sister shows the purebreds.

Generally, the two herds appear similar. The difference, according to Paul, is that purebreds have records that may be traced to the Swiss Alps. The American herd that Paul raises can be traced for at least 24 generations but not to the Swiss Alps.

"There is a push within the Dairy Goat Association to convert American Toggenburgs after five generations to Purebred Toggenburgs," Paul said.

While the brother and sister compete against each other in the show ring, Paul said, "We function as a herd group. Amy tends to be a better showman and I, a better fitter. The premium money goes back into the show circuit."

Paul is a senior at Central Bucks West High School. After high school graduation, Paul plans to obtain an official goat judging license. Three tiers of license are available according to how applicants score on written and oral exams. The first level is apprentice, the second is senior, and the third advanced.

After he becomes a vet scientist, Paul expects to stay affiliated with the industry by judging show animals.

As both Pennsylvania and National Goat Representative, Paul Plummer wants to do his part in clearing up many misconceptions that people have about goats. Representative duties require Paul to attend numerous public functions as the spokesperson for the industry and to attend as many goat shows as possible across the U.S.

Feeding Minds For Tomorrow

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Margaret A. Wolff, wife of the Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Boyd Wolff, accepted the first contribution to the Pennsylvania Foundation for Better Living's 1993 fund-raising drive. PA FBL works to educate the general public about the importance of the food and fiber system and the role of agriculture in their daily lives.

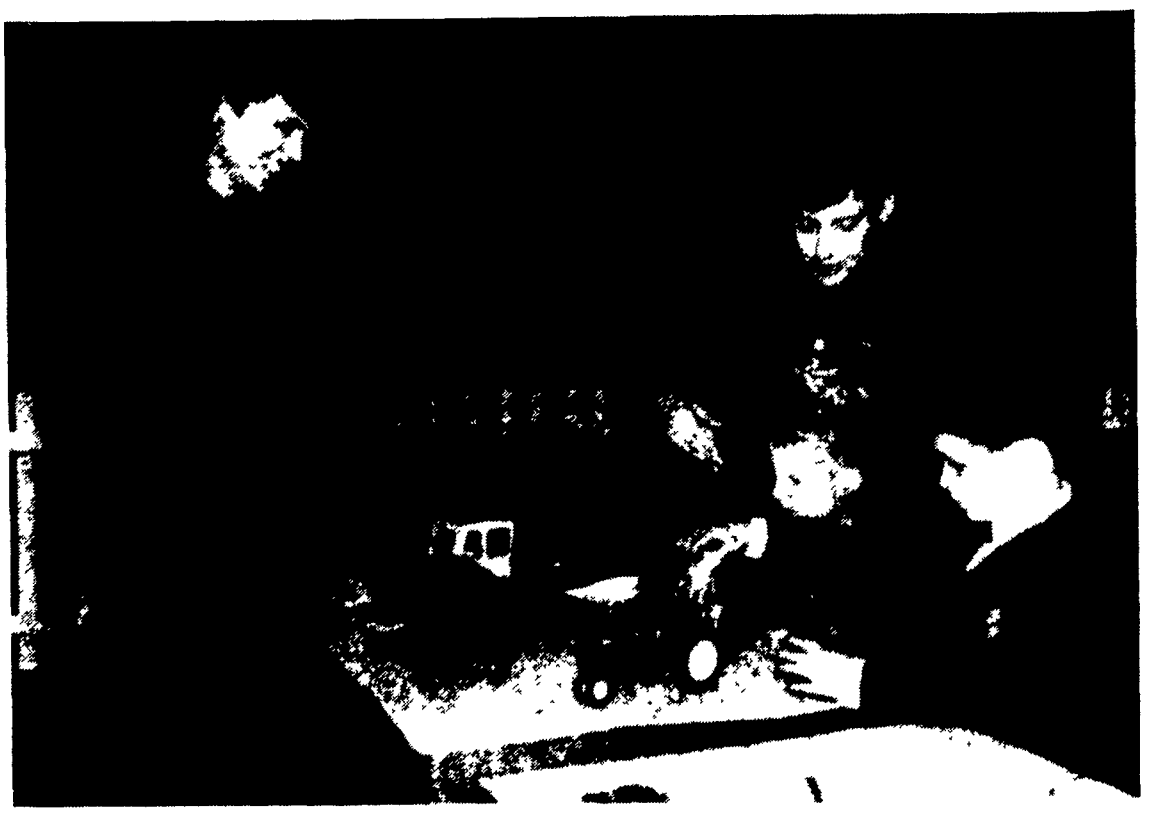
At a press conference held during Farm Show week, the Pennsylvania Dairymen's Association presented a check for $2,500 to Mrs. Wolff supporting the mission of the foundation.

In 1992 the foundation hosted a four-day teachers' workshop for 45 teachers to increase the understanding of the relationship between agriculture and the consumer and the economy. This summer two workshops are planned to accommodate 100 elementary teachers.

Christine Jacobs, a kindergarten teacher and a graduate of last summer's workshop explained how she incorporates the information she learned into her regular curriculum. She also has shared her knowledge and teaching materials with other teachers in her school.

Following the press conference Mrs. Jacobs and her students toured the Farm Show.

Besides the teachers' workshop, PA FBL is establishing a speakers' bureau and provides teaching materials and follow-up support for teachers.



At left, Beth Heath Moore, executive director for the Pennsylvania Foundation for Better Living, and Christine Jacobs, teacher, encourage creative, hands-on activities that teach children about the value of agriculture. Both women spoke at the press conference held at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The Pennsylvania State Farm Show has grown so very large—a 60 acre site. My husband remembers when it was scattered in several buildings in downtown Harrisburg near the Mulberry Street Bridge. He tells me that cattle were led from one place to another to be shown.

When we went to the Farm Show this year, I picked up quite a few pamphlets for our farmer son as he was not able to go. Everything from farmland preservation, milk pricing, poly ceiling panels to a motorcycle manual was stuffed into a carrying bag. Usually I only take home a cookbook and maybe another calendar.

I found a lecture on pruning trees to be quite interesting. The lecturer told the group that often mulch is placed too close to the trunk of a tree and causes it to die due to moisture suffocating the living cells. I'll have to check on our maple trees.

The cooking demonstrations had long lines of people waiting in line to sample the food that was just cooked.

Many people sat to watch the dairy cattle judging and the junior swine showmanship contest in the afternoon. I suspect that they were also resting their tired feet. Most folks do not walk for four or five hours without sitting down to rest.

The vegetable display is something that I like a lot. This year I was surprised to see a very large watermelon displayed. It was enough to make me hungry and so I got a chocolate milkshake and later a cinnamon bun to take home and have for breakfast the next day. Putting the bun in the microwave for a few seconds made it taste as though it were fresh baked.

The Farm Show certainly has something for everyone!

"Let the farmer forevermore be honored in his calling, for they who labor in the earth are the chosen people of God."
Thomas Jefferson

"Agriculture not only gives riches to a nation, but the only riches she can call her own."
Samuel Johnson

A Passport To Fantasy At The Philadelphia Flower Show

PHILADELPHIA (Philadelphia Co.) — Fairytale castles and Gallic gardens are shrouded in frothy mist — in Philadelphia. Softly hued perennials tremble in the crisp ocean breeze. Scotland, with its majestic countryside and elegant formal gardens, emerges as the 1993 Philadelphia Flower Show presents "Preserving The Past, Presenting the Future", March 7-14 at the Philadelphia Civic Center.

Enter the show's central display through an intricate tapestried maze of formal beds and sculpted hedges that mirror a parterre of the Great Garden at Pitmedden. Stroll past the ancient walled garden, its floral chintz pattern of espaliered apple trees and rows of vegetables it for a king's table. Behold the treasures of the National Trust for Scotland—a feast of blossoms, history, and lore. When the bagpiper's music fads away, spring's floral concert begins.

The largest and most prestigious indoor flower show in the world beckons you from past to future through six acres of luxuriant rose gardens, leafy green glens, an orchid paradise and more.

From Indoensia to the British Isles, Uruguay to Holland, the flowers of each nation are presented by delegates of the World Association of Flower Arrangers. This unprecedented display provides a debut for spectacular floral creations, enroute to Toronto's international flower competition. A world show-case of blooming talent continues as 54 other major exhibitors conjure up images of the past and present the cutting-edge technology of the future.

A freeze-dried floral fantasy echos still-life images of a Victorian wedding. Plant species of tomrrow incubate in a rainforest's biotech laboratory. From Legendary to Future Shock there is a gardening style, floral combination or botanical gem to excite one and all.

More than 1,700 entries of window boxes and bonsai, dinner table settings and miniature rooms, mammoth-sized flower arrangements and others the size of a thimble, vie for the Show's coveted major awards in 583 artistic and horticultural categories. Free lectures and demonstrations on gardening, flower arranging and photography, present the talent of floral designers and horticultural experts. In the marketplace, 100 vendors offer potted plants, cut flowers, birdhouses, statuary and handmade baskets.

The Philadelphia Flower Show will be held Mach 7-14, at the Philadelphia Civic Center, 34th Street and Civic Center Boulevard, Philadelphia, PA 19104. Show hours are Sundays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Tickets are available at the door; $11.50 for adults; $5.75 for children under 12. Group tickets are available in advance from the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society for $10.75 (minimum of 10 if ordered by mail). For additional show, travel or accommodation information, please call (215)625-8253 or write to PHS, 325 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, PA 19106-2777.

Helpful Facts Ease Feet

BETHESDA, Md. — You pay your money and you take your choice, but when it comes to shopping for shoes, one thing that doesn't change is your need to get a shoe with proper support.

Here are some buying tips from podiatrists that can help.

- Have your feet measured while you're standing.
- Always try on both shoes, and walk around the store.
- Buy for the larger foot; feet are seldom precisely the same size.
- Don't buy shoes that need a break-in period — shoes should be comfortable immediately.
- Don't rely on the size of your last pair of shoes. Your feet do get larger, and lasts also vary.
- Shop for shoes late in the day; feet tend to swell during the day, and it's best to be fitted when they're at their largest.
- Be sure that shoes fit well - front, back and sides — to distribute weight. It sounds elementary, but be sure the widest part of your foot corresponds to the widest part of the shoe.
- Select a shoe with a leather upper, stiff heel counter, appropriate cushioning and flexibility at the ball of the foot.
- Buy shoes that don't pinch your toes at the tips or across the toe box.

Try on shoes while you're wearing the same type of socks or stockings you expect to wear with the shoes.

Finally, if you haven't had a foot examination in over a year, it's time. Doctors of podiatric medicine are health care professionals trained in the care of your foot. Whenever you have questions about selecting the right pair of shoes, or other aspects of foot health — for yourself or for your family — your DPM is there to help.

For a free pamphlet on choosing proper shoes, or if you have other questions on foot health call the American Podiatric Medical Association at 1-800-FOOTCARE (366-8227) or write the Association at: 9312 Old Georgetown Rd., Bethesda, MD 20814.

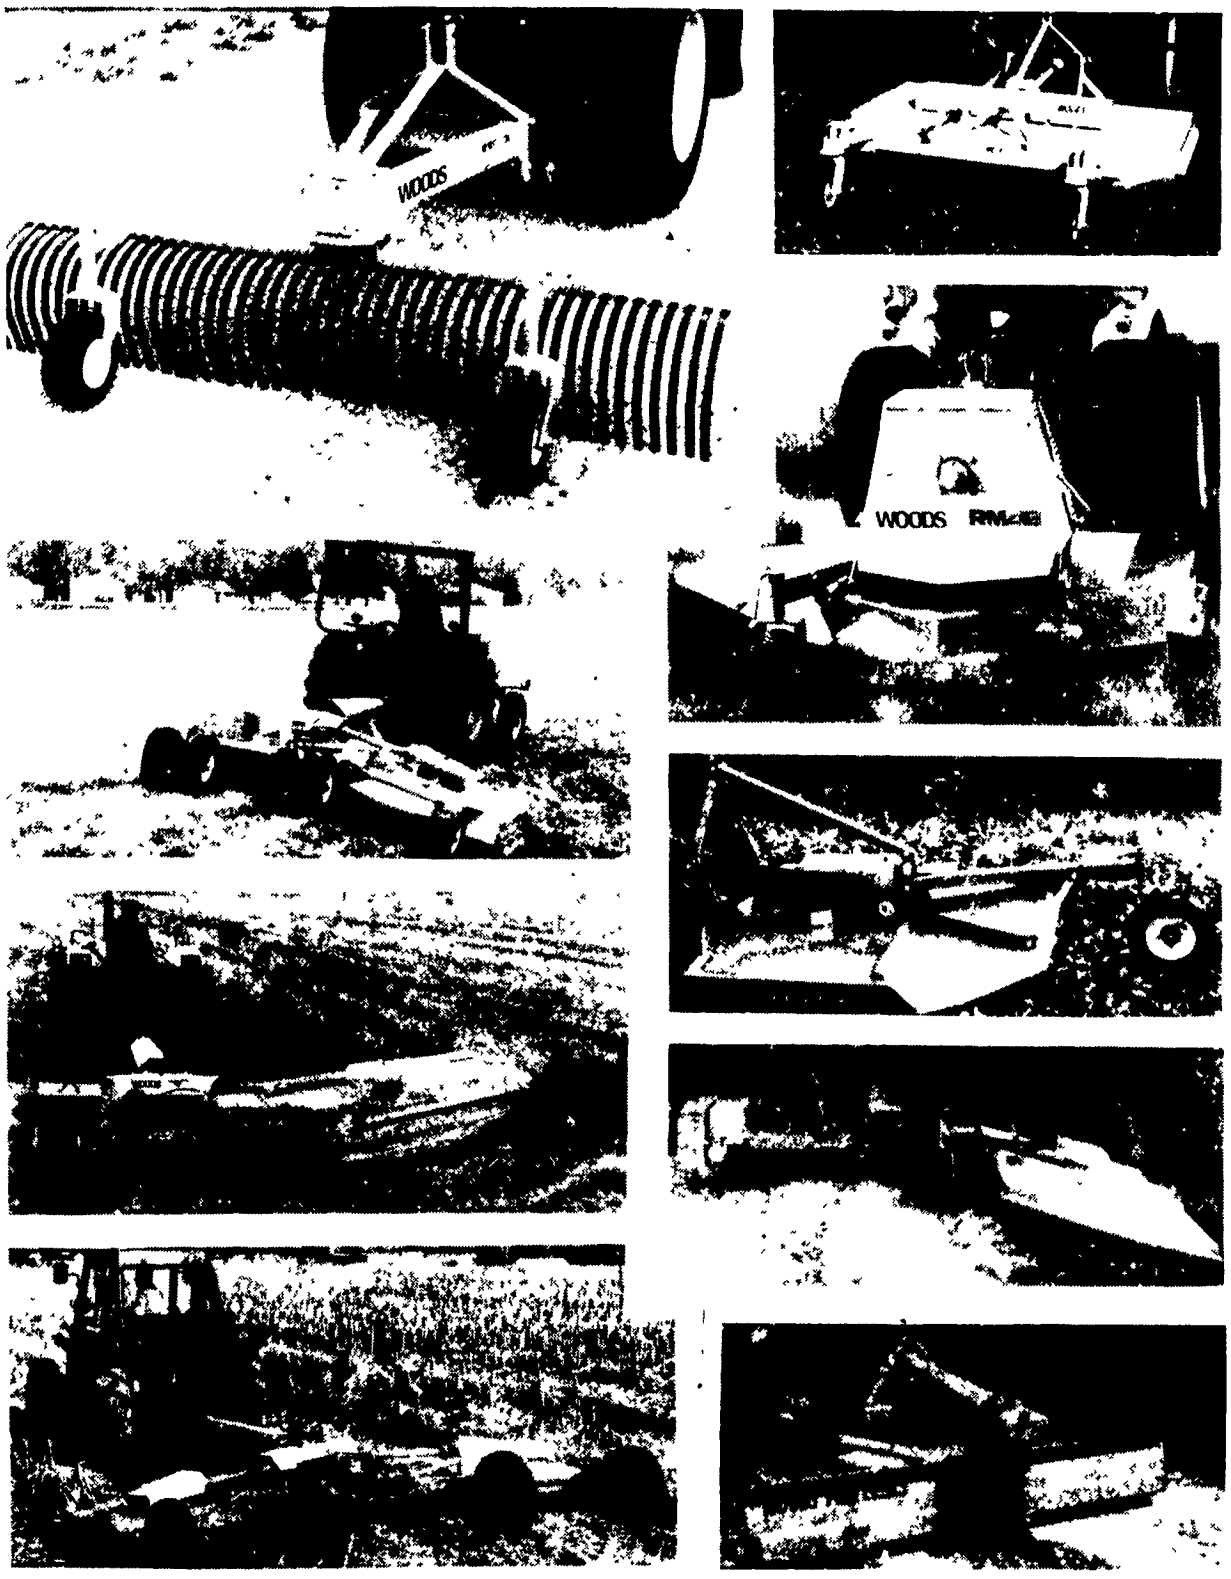
One tree doesn't make a Woods



Nor does just one product. That's why when Woods introduced the world's first successful tractor powered rotary shredder back in 1947, they didn't rest on their laurels. Instead, they continued to apply outstanding engineering expertise producing equipment packed with performance, reliability and value. The results: a line-up of over 50 different products including mowers, cutters, rear scraper blades, backhoes and specialty machines. The best that money can buy.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Service To 4-H

Progressive Clovers 4-H Club President Mary Ellen Seraydian congratulated club leader Mrs. Sylvia Miller for 25 years of service to the 4-H program (1968-1993).

She starts her 25th year this month.

Thanks to Sylvia for the many hours of hard work and dedication, the club today boasts 49 members.

The club members gave her a jacket and handmade card to start out the new year.

Rough Riders Holds Recognition Night

Rough Riders 4-H Horse and Pony Club held their recognition night recently at The Memorial United Methodist Church in Quarryville.

All members attending were awarded their certificates of achievement. They were recognized before the club and parents. Parents were also recognized for their help and support during the past year.

A plaque was awarded to Ralph and RoseMary Kroener for their support in giving the 4-Her's a place to hold their meetings and allowing them the use of their large indoor ring.

The club also awarded a Sports-

MERCER (Mercer Co.) — Mercer County 4-H youth danced into a blue ribbon placing at the 77th Pennsylvania State Farm Show Folk Dance Festival and contest at Harrisburg. The 10 Mercer County 4-H youth square danced to folk songs as they were judged on uniformity, rhythm, appearance, and response to the calls.

"The youth have been practicing for the contest since early December," says Beth Lair, Mercer County 4-H Agent and Team Coach. "In addition to the fun they have dancing, they learn about teamwork and the different musical cultures."

The Mercer County 4-H Square Dance team will perform for various audiences throughout the year with hopes of having two teams represent Mercer County 4-H at the 1994 State Farm Show.

Tractor Safety Course

Bucks County 4-H is offering a course on tractor safety to youth age 14 to 16 years of age. Whether the youth plans to work on their parents' farm, a neighbor's farm, or work for landscaper, this course may be an essential learning experience.

The course will be held in the Doylestown area. The course involves attending evening classes and then passing a tractor driving test to finish the course.

Upon successful completion of the course, students become certified to perform certain tasks on the farm that they would otherwise be prohibited from doing under child labor and Pennsylvania laws. The law states that youth in the 14 to 16 age group must complete a tractor safety course before being allowed to drive a tractor.

Preregistration is required. For more information or to register, call the Bucks County extension office at (215)345-3283 and ask for Celeste. Deadline for registration is February 19. Evening classes will begin on February 22.

Sewing Bugs 4-H

The Sewing Bugs 4-H Club met recently at the home of leader Mrs. Marilyn Rebogen.

Three show and tells were presented. Megan Class showed how to cross-stitch and then showed us her collection of pigs.

Jenna Class taught us how to make chocolate covered animal crackers. Laura Ebersole showed the travel kit she made last year. The club worked on cooking and sewing projects.

At the December 5 meeting, Nicole Rebogen showed things in a sewing box. Melissa and Jessica Anderson demonstrated how to make Christmas decorations by decorating empty spools. The members discussed entering projects in the Farm Show.

At the January 2 meeting, Sara Cartwright did a show and tell about good snacks and once in a while snacks. Marie Cartwright explained how to create a weekly spending plan. Members made microwave food treats of chunky cheese soup and microwave hot dogs. Projects were prepared to take to the Farm Show.

The next meeting will be held on February 6.

More Funds For Pork

CHICAGO, IL — The Pork Industry Group announced last week that it will increase its programs by $540,000. These funds are from packer/processor investments and sale of material.

"We feel that it is important to put as many dollars as possible to work for the entire pork industry. These additional dollars will augment 1993 checkoff funding from the National Pork Board of $3.5 million," says Pork industry Group Budget Chairman David Reinecker, York Springs, Penn.

The bulk of the additional funding, $325,000, will be put into expanding the Pork Industry Group's Doctor Opinion Correction Campaign. This program, based on a pilot test in 1992, will reach virtually every family practice, general practice and internal medicine specialist in the country that is part of a single-specialty group practice.

Other information programs to receive funding are Text Check, an education program to provide correct information to school textbook publishers; the development of a low-fat cooking video for healthcare professionals; and a formal nutrition issues monitoring program. These three projects, joint programs with the beef industry, total $75,000.

An economic evaluation of the importance of by-products to the pork industry ranks as a priority for the pork industry. This evaluation will be completed for presentation at a special By-Products Symposium in early 1993.

Other research programs that received additional funding were pork product research grants, issue exploration, and a sanitation program for the handling of processed products. The research program received $140,000 additional dollars.

The Pork Industry Group, a division of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, conducts demand-building research and information programs. These programs are funded by producer checkoffs, packers and processors.

Cedar Crest FFA Chapter Participates in National Commodity Marketing Activity

The Cedar Crest FFA Chapter is participating in the National FFA Organization's Commodity Marketing Activity.

The Commodity Marketing Activity is an integrated classroom and real-life activity that helps students gain a realistic commodity marketing experience.

Teams of students are given a model farm with corn, soybeans, wheat, cattle and hogs. Team members decide when to buy and sell these products to achieve the greatest economic gain. Orders are called to a commodity broker and the trade is recorded. Real prices and market conditions are experienced but no money is exchanged. Each FFA chapter may have up to three teams consisting of 4-6 members.

The team which earns the highest combined total in trading and test scores will receive the state title and a $300 scholarship to be divided among team members.

The Commodity Marketing Activity is sponsored by the Steward-Peterson Advisory Group and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange as a special project of the National FFA Foundation, Inc.

Service Workers To Upgrade Handling Skills

Restaurants and food service workers who wish to upgrade their skills in sanitary food handling can enroll in an intensive food handling course co-sponsored by Delaware Cooperative Extension and POLYTECH Adult Education.

The 21-hour course, Commercial Food Service Sanitation, will meet at POLYTECH North at 100 Denny's Road in Dover on Wednesday evenings from Feb. 17 through March 31 from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Dr. Sue Snider, University of Delaware Extension food and nutrition specialist will instruct the class. Students will earn continuing education units and a certificate upon successful completion of the course.

The course will examine the special sanitation needs of commercial food operations, including the flow of food through the operation, the necessity of clean facilities and equipment, and crisis and sanitation management plans. The class will review case studies that illustrate many scenarios involving food sanitation that confront commercial operations.

Registration costs $35. Cost of text is additional. Preregistration is advised. To register, call POLYTECH at (302) 674-5015.

RIGIDPLY RAFTERS INC.

MANUFACTURERS of LAMINATED RAFTERS
and WOOD ROOF TRUSSES

701 E. Linden St., RICHLAND, PA 17087

MEMBER NFBA

In the summer of 1954, the Shirk family began to manufacture laminated wood rafters in their home in Myerstown, Pennsylvania. Before and after school, several sets of rafters were glued and clamped together in the basement of their house. In time, the family felt that the business needed a name which was truly descriptive of the quality product that they were producing. The name Rigidply Rafters was established in 1954 by Chester F. Shirk, owner and operator of this contracting company.

In the years that followed, a number of changes and challenges occured. 1963 brought the introduction of a new product line, wood roof trusses, and the first crane truck was put into operation in 1964.

Call Our Sales Staff TODAY With Your Special Building Requirements And Let Us Design A Post Frame Building For YOU!

In 1971 the business expanded to include yet another market, that being the Post Frame Building Industry. That same year saw Rigidply develop a relationship with Fabral corp as being our supplier of steel and aluminum cladding.

Through the years we have seen a number of changes occur in the "Pole Building Industry," as was formerly called. Today we're seeing the picture change again, but the agricultural buildings we're designing now are far more sophisticated than ever before.

The term "diaphragm action" is no longer foreign to the industry, but, there are two questions people most often ask.

How does diaphragm action work? and why should I care about diaphragm action?

Diaphragm action is a technical way of saying that the roof and ceiling of a building are being used to help carry lateral (wind) loads.

Diaphragm action is achieved when posts on the endwalls of a building, extend to the top chord of engineered trusses which are connected by purlins two feet on center. The building must then be covered with a steel cladding and fastened with screws or sheeted with plywood and nailed, which in turn helps to strengthen the building. Large openings in the endwalls should have headers installed that are engineered to transfer the load across the opening.

Because of the diaphragm action, post sizes, and their embedment depth can be reduced, and the number of knee braces can be reduced or eliminated entirely. This leads to a stronger building for a more economical price.

In 1985, the post frame building industry received yet another benefit, the developement of "The Glu-Lam Post," which are manufactured in our plant. These posts were tested and approved for use in the post frame construction industry by engineers at The Pennsylvania State University, and Wood Mechanics Personnel. These posts can be manufactured up to 60' lengths. Along with their many benefits, they prove to be very effective in acquiring diaphragm action, because of the possibilities of the longer lengths.

We are confident that with our large inventory of post frame building materials, efficient manufacturing plants, engineering and sales personnel, we are well equipped to meet the needs of you, our customer.

Everyone at Rigidply Rafters, Inc. is fully committed to serving our customers and providing them with the finest products available. The excellence that we strive for is to show our appreciation for our customers continued loyalty to Rigidply Rafters. You deserve the best!

U.S. To Host World Angus Forum

RAPID CITY, S.D.—The Angus world will be centered on the United States in 1993 when the American Angus Association hosts the Seventh World Angus Forum here September 19-21.

Representing virtually every major Angus breeding country in the world, breeders from 15 nations are expected to attend.

The World Forum was last held in the United States in 1973, according to Richard L. Spader, executive vice president of the American Angus Association and secretary of the World Aberdeen-Angus Secretariat, the parent organization of the Forum. The 1973 event was the Second World Angus Forum, held on the centennial anniversary of the first importation of Angus cattle into the United States. Argentina was host to the last Forum in 1989.

To give foreign guests and others a comprehensive look at the U.S. Angus and beef cattle industry, the American Angus Association is planning a unique Angus Across America tour, September 13-26. It will begin on Monday evening, September 13, in St. Joseph, Missouri, home of the American Angus Association. After an open house at the Association office, and a meeting of the delegates to the World Aberdeen-Angus Secretariat, the group will begin the first leg of the tour. They will view farming, cattle raising and feeding operations in Missouri, Iowa, and eastern Nebraska. After a visit to Husker Harvest Days near Hastings, Neb., guests will travel through the famed Nebraska Sandhills ranch country and arrive in Rapid City, on Saturday, September 18.

The World Forum is set for Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday, September 19-21. It will kick off with a cattle disply, Native American dancing, an Old West Barbecue dinner, and a trip to the famed Mt. Rushmore National Monument for the dramatic night lighting ceremony.

The formal program Monday, September 20, will explore the theme, "ANGUS-A World of Opportunity." Speakers will outline how Angus cattle fit into the world beef production scheme. Special guest speaker at the noon lunch will be NASA Astronaut and Angus Breeder Mark Lee. In addition, country representatives will report on the status of Angus cattle and the Angus business around the world.

On Tuesday, September 21, the Black Hills Angus Association will sponsor a tour of the Black Hills and cattle operations in the area. The tour will complete the three-day World Forum program. At that point the short version of the Angus Across America tour will return to St. Joseph and Kansas City, traveling east across South Dakota then south through eastern Iowa. The remainder of the group will leave Rapid City for the second half of the "Angus Across America" tour. This portion of the tour will take a close look at the Angus business in Montana, and join, for one day, the famous Montana Angus tour. Later the group will travel through Yellowstone National Park, and Grand Teton National Park before arriving at the International Airport in Denver, Colorado, on Sunday, September 26.

Three options will be offered to those interested in the World Forum and Angus Across America tour. The most extensive will be the 14-day package including the full Angus Across America tour and the World Angus Forum program. Second is the first half of the Angus Across America tour and the World Angus Forum. Third option will be the three-day World Angus Forum in Rapid City, South Dakota.

Tour and Forum registration information is available from the American Angus Association, 3201 Frederick Blvd., St. Joseph, Missouri 64506, (816)233-3101.

PSEUDORABIES VACCINATION QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Dr. Amy J. Nesselrodt
Dr. Paul M. Pitcher
USDA Veterinarians

In the last edition of Pennsylvania PRV Headlines, issues surrounding pseudorabies vaccination were discussed.

This week, commonly asked questions will be answered.

More than 200 of Pennsylvania's swine herds are being vaccinated against pseudorabies. There are many swine herds that are not vaccinating but which should because they are located near other herds that are infected with pseudorabies.

Will vaccination prevent pseudorabies infection? Not always. Vaccination does not provide perfect protection against infection.

Why, then, should I vaccinate? Properly administered vaccination is very effective at reducing or preventing signs of pseudorabies in a swine herd.

These signs were discussed in an earlier article in this series (October 24, 1992 issue of Lancaster Farming). The signs of pseudorabies can be obvious and costly in an acute outbreak. Often, however, the signs are not as obvious. In the grow/finish herd, losses because of slower and less efficient growth may be hard to observe unless careful measurements of feed consumption and days to market are made.

Even though these less obvious signs are harder to observe, they are very costly. Also, there is evidence that pseudorabies infection makes a herd more prone to other, more devastating diseases such as rhinitis and pneumonia.

Properly vaccinated pigs have greater resistance to infection with pseudorabies than unvaccinated pigs. This means that it takes a larger amount of virus to infect a vaccinated pig. Vaccination can allow the swine producer to avoid being quarantined for pseudorabies, because this resistance will help prevent infection of the herd if the pigs are exposed to pseudorabies.

Exposure to infective doses of pseudorabies virus is much more likely during the cool months, so it is important to boost herd protection now.

If they do become infected, properly vaccinated pigs shed much less virus than unvaccinated pigs. This prevents new infections and controls the spread of pseudorabies on the farm and to neighboring farms.

Is it cost-effective to vaccinate against pseudorabies? Yes. Field studies in Illinois and Minnesota have indicated that conversion of feed to pork can be improved by 6 to 10 percent when pseudorabies virus circulation is prevented by vaccination of fat hogs. Daily gain is also improved, so pigs reach market weight sooner. The Minnesota study found that one dose of vaccine given to fat hogs returned an additional $13 gross profit per pig!

The incidence of diseases such as rhinitis and pneumonia can be reduced by pseudorabies vaccination. A producer in Illinois estimated that pseudorabies vaccination returned $3 to $4 in improved performance for each $1 spent on vaccine.

Do I need to vaccinate the entire herd, or can I just vaccinate my breeding herd? Experience has shown that it is difficult to prevent or eliminate the disease in a breeding herd if virus is circulating on a nearby finish floor. Have fat hogs blood-tested for pseudorabies to determine if they have been circulating virus.

Vaccination is only one of several tools effective at eliminating pseudorabies from a herd. Several top managers in Lancaster County have apparently eliminated pseudorabies from their finish floors by using segregation and biosecurity techniques (see the Pennsylvania PRV Headlines column in the December 19, 1992 issue of Lancaster Farming). Their management skills ensure a stress-free environment for their hogs, which helps to prevent pseudorabies virus circulation.

I have heard different recommendations of how often to vaccinate for pseudorabies. What is the best advice? In the past, we advised vaccinating the breeding herd against pseudorabies twice a year or prior to each farrowing. However, experience has shown that the protection given by vaccination may be gone in less than six months, making the herd prone to infection before the next booster is given. Ideally, the breeding herd should be vaccinated every three months, or four times per year. In many herds, it appears that vaccinating every four months or three times per year provides continuous protection against pseudorabies infection.

A word of caution: If the herd is severely challenged at a time when protection is at a low ebb, vaccinating every four months may not be adequate to prevent infection of the herd.

Try to time pseudorabies vaccination to anticipate periods when severe challenge is likely (late fall, winter, and early spring).

Grower Wins World Forage Superbowl

ELKHORN, Iowa—"It takes a lot of attention and detail to make top quality hay," said champion alfalfa grower Roger Mikkelsen.

Recently, Mikkelsen won the commercial hay contest of the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis.

This year, Mikkelsen entered first-cut hay from a third-year stand of CimarronVR alfalfa. It tested 205 RFV.

"To get this kind of hay, you have to cut early and often," said Mikkelsen. "I take the first cutting in the bud stage and, thereafter, I cut at 28 to 32 day intervals. I get four cuttings a year, and sometimes I sneak in a fifth."

To avoid winterkill, Roger never cuts hay in September. But after freeze he takes a final cutting.

"Last winter was hard on alfalfa," he said. "The temperature dropped to 20 below in November and we had a warm-up in January. There was a lot of ice sheeting, and plants in some of the older fields heaved. My three-year-old stand of CimarronVR alfalfa came through the winter in good shape, however. I like CimarronVR because it persists well and grows back fast after cutting."

He grows corn, soybeans, and more than 200 acres of alfalfa. His main interest is the alfalfa, which he sells locally and to feed lots.

"I grow corn and soybeans mainly for rotation," he said. He limes his soil a year before planting alfalfa to a ph of 7. Fertilizer is applied according to soil test before planting, and potash and phosphates are applied after the first cutting each year. Roger likes to plant 18 to 20 pounds of high quality seed per acre.

The Mikkelsens love farming. "I get a lot of help from my wife and three daughters," said Roger. "They know about as much about alfalfa as I do."

Wenger Addresses PACD

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Senator Noah Wenger of Lancaster County was guest speaker for the quarterly meeting of the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts (PACD) recently at the Holiday Inn in Grantville.

Wenger, a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee and co-sponsor of the Ag 2000 legislation, addressed the statewide gathering on prospects for 1993 agricultural and environmental legislation.

The senator predicted that the 1993 sessions of the General Assembly would see through the passage of a nutrient management bill which could address the needs of both farmers and the environmental community, and which would stress incentives and education. He also expects to see passage of environmental education legislation for Pennsylvania schools, and he believes we will see legislation implemented which would make it easier for industries to re-use former industrial sites, rather than undeveloped land, for expansion.

By releasing new industries from financial responsibility for cleaning up industrial sites which have been polluted by the former owners, it would provide an economic incentive to revitalize former urban industrial areas and at the same time protect dwindling virgin countryside and farmland.

Senator Wenger credited conservation districts with serving as a valuable bridge between the agricultural and environmental communities, thus making it easier for policy makers to create solutions to problems which are mutually satisfactory to all concerned. In noting the important service conservation districts provide, he quoted former President Eisenhower's statement, "Farming looks pretty easy when your plow is a pencil and your corn field is a thousand miles away."

The three-day session of conservation district directors and staff also consisted of training sessions and the preview of a slide presentation developed for all the county offices to use in their efforts to inform the public of the services provided by Pennsylvania's conservation districts.

8. Your old hoppers aren't wore out. Save money and reuse them on your new system.
9. We have our own installation crews to be sure the equipment is properly installed. Competition hires outside crews.
10. Eggs move gently from the birds, to the belts and thru the collector unit. The eggs are not like balls in a bowling alley as in some competitive systems.
11. Incredible! New left hand drive allows feed chain to travel up to 120 F.P.M.
12. Your present gearboxes and motors can be re-used to save money.
13. The Big Dutchman chain feeder gives 2½ times more feeder space than the grind auger.

16. The sliding door on a Big Dutchman system is easy to open and close and it stays closed.
17. The Big Dutchman collector is the best there is. Don't accept an imitation.
18. Our cage design allows eggs to roll front and out of the cage, not get stepped on and cracked by birds as in competitive cages.
19. Big Dutchman systems provides a bigger percentage of larger eggs for a longer period of time.

Gro-Mor Expands Nutrient Management Program

LEOLA (Lancaster Co.) — Gro-Mor Plant Food Company recently expanded its nutrient management program, Nutrient Solutions in Agriculture, a move that benefits many Lancaster County farmers.

The Leola-based company is expanding the program throughout the eastern United States, and Martin Campfield, a certified professional agronomist, has been appointed to the newly-created position of director of agronomic services.

Campfield is a 1980 graduate of Pennsylvania State University with a bachelor's in agronomy and a state-certified nutrient management planner. Previously, he worked in sales and agronomy with a liquid fertilizer company and as a nutrient management and pest control consultant to farmers. Most recently, he was manager of development for a fertilizer company.

In his new position, Campfield will be responsible for coordinating approved nutrient management planning with Gro-Mor's custom-designed, computerized crop fertility recommendations to help farmers improve management of whole-farm nutrient cycles (feed to manure to soil to crop).

According to Gro-Mor Plant Food Company President Bruce Moyer, "As part of our dedication to providing premium, high-quality, true-solution fertilizers, Gro-Mor has always provided soil testing and fertilizer recommendations. With the increasing need for scientific, environmentally-sound nutrient management planning, an expansion of these services is being implemented."

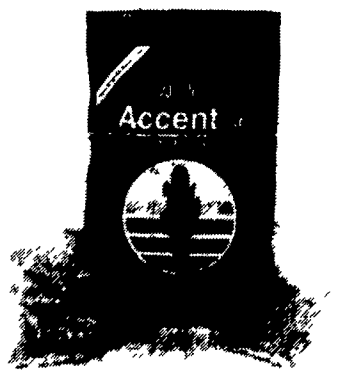
Earl Kauffman, territory manager for Berks County, said, "The impact of this program will be to help each farmer using it come to compliance with clean water standards and to be more efficient and cost-effective in not just fertilization, but all aspects of nutrient management. This means that the program will have a positive impact on everyone concerned and might even determine whether or not a farmer survives."

James Erwin, territory manager, said, "The creation of the new division, 'Nutrient Solutions in Agriculture,' opens a new and exciting field for myself and our company. As we strive to keep our Lancaster County farmers profitable, we must work to establish the critical balance between what the farmer must do and what we must do to assure a safe and sound environment for generations to come."

Accent Packaged In Water-Soluble Film

WILMINGTON, Del. — Du Pont has improved its popular Accent corn herbicide by packaging the product in premeasured, water-soluble film.

Starting with the 1993 growing season, Accent will be available in four-acre dissolvable packets. The packaging upgrade enhances the positive environmental qualities of Accent and makes the product even easier to use, said Stephanie Peters, Accent product manager.



Each package of Du Pont Accent herbicide in new water-soluble packaging treats four acres at the labeled rate of 2/3-ounce per acre. There are five packets — or 20 acres — of Accent per resealable bag.

"We've taken a product that has proved itself to be effective and gentle on the environment and made it even better," Peters said.

Each water-soluble packet treats four acres at the labeled rate of 2/3 ounce per acre. There are five packets — or 20 acres — of Accent per resealable bag, and three bags per 60-acre carton. Leftover packets can be stored in the resealable bags until needed.

"The new packaging means the applicator is not exposed to the product," Peters said. "Soluble packaging also makes disposal simple. The only packaging that's left are the resealable bags, which can be thrown out without rinsing."

The premeasured bags ensure accurate measurement of Accent and increase application efficiency. Surveys of farmers and custom applicators show that the tank-mix flexibility of the four-acre packet size appeals to the greatest number of users, Peters said.

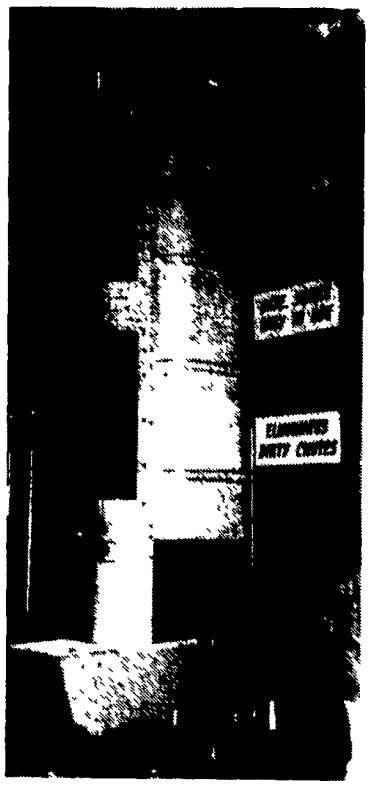
Du Pont was the first agricultural company to package a product in poly-vinyl alcohol (PVA) film. Since then, Du Pont has improved the technology by developing a new generation of PVA film — such as the soluble packaging for Accent — that dissolves faster and more completely, even under cold-water conditions.

"This is truly a first, Peters said. "We've enhanced the dissolving characteristics so that an applicator doesn't have to worry about undissolved film residues plugging his screens or spray nozzles."

For best results, Peters recommends that the spray tank be filled three-quarters of the way with clean water. The Accent packets should be put in the tank next, followed by surfactant and other additives.

"The new soluble packaging for Accent is the right choice for the applicator and the environment," Peters said.

Bubble Chute Designed For All Silos



LAKE MILLS, Wis. — The Fiberdome all-fiberglass "Bubble Chute System" is a proven and patented ultra-clean system for all new or existing upright silos. Even the vintage silos from the 1950s and 1960s can be converted.

This system offers a complete permanent feed control system. You can order a new silo or update your present structure with a system that gives you all the enhanced features. No more hodge-podge cutting metal chutes. And no more obstructed climbing in dark or damp chutes.

The fiberglass construction allows it to withstand the toughest beating the weather elements or silo unloading systems can dish out. The chute is fabricated in sections and has tongue-and-groove design to keep feed in and dust and water out.

The Fiberdome Bubble Chute is streamlined and 70 percent translucent to allow light in to dry accumulated moisture. The chute carries a lifetime warranty.

A new five-pound jug will make it easier for growers across the South to apply Logic fire ant bait. The jug features a "shaker top" that allows applicators to treat individual fire ant mounds.

Packaging Makes Product Easier To Handle

(GREEBSBORO, N.C.)—A new five-pound jug will make it easier for growers across the South to apply Logic® fire ant bait.

The jug features a "shaker top" that allows applicators to treat individual fire ant mounds. Growers also can open the jug and pour the powder into a spreader.

"The new package was designed to make the product easier to handle, especially for spot treatments," said Product Manager Bob Brown. "The five-pound jug is convenient for farmers who do not need to treat large areas. It can be used all around the farm on noncropped and nongrazed areas. On horse farms, the product can be used on pasture, rangeland and other grazed areas."

Logic is a fenoxycarb (insect growth regulator) bait that is picked up by foraging worker ants and distributed as food throughout the colony. As a result, the queen lays eggs that do not develop properly.

The compound is attractive only to fire ants and has no effect on beneficial insects.

Obtaining a Forest Stewardship Management Plan

The first step in becoming a forest steward is obtaining a Forest Stewardship Management Plan. Once a landowner has this stewardship plan, he or she is able to participate in other cost-share practices available under the Stewardship Incentive Program. The stewardship plan will essentially describe the woodlot, help the landowner know what practices need to be done, where these activities need to be done, and when they should be done in order to meet the objectives established for the woodlot.

To obtain a stewardship plan the first thing that a landowner needs to do is get in touch with the local Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry Service Forester. The service forester will discuss the woods with the landowner and will fill out a questionnaire with the landowner that will help in determining the appropriate objectives.

After meeting with the service forester and if cost share-assistance is desired through the stewardship incentive program, the landowner will need to complete the necessary paper work at the county ASCS office. The service forester, meanwhile, will complete some preliminary information on the property that will be included in the final stewardship plan. When the landowner is notified that his or her application has been approved, the service forester will provide a list of resources professionals that have completed the necessary training and have met the educational and experience standards set by the Bureau of Forestry. The landowner will choose the resource professionals needed to complete the plan (a forester must be one of the individuals preparing the plan, other individuals such as a wildlife biologist can co-author a plan).

The landowner should meet with the resources professionals chosen to complete the stewardship plan and discuss with them the goals he or she has. The landowner should meet with the professionals as often as needed in plan preparation. A landowner should never accept a plan he or she is not happy with.

When the plan is completed the landowner should submit the plan to the service forester for approval. When it is approved the individual will pay the resource professionals in full and then the landowner will receive reimbursement from the ASCS according to the appropriate schedule. A landowner that has a completed approved stewardship plan will receive a Stewardship Forest sign that should be displayed at the entrance to the property. This completed plan should be referred to often, as it can only be a useful tool if its recommendations are carried out as much as possible.

"BIRD LEGS" IN SPACE

Roland M. Leach, Jr.
Professor of Poultry Science

In a previous article ("Dem Bonz, Dem Bonz," 12/12/92 38(5):C3), I mentioned the fact that NASA is very interested in studies on bone metabolism.

The major reason for this interest is something we earthlings take for granted — gravity. Here on earth, gravity has a profound effect upon the physical aspects of our body.

A good way to visualize this phenomena is to determine how high you can jump and how long you can stay in the air — probably not very high (inches) and not very long (seconds). Compare this with videotapes of astronauts floating around the cabin of a spaceship trying to hang onto objects or to eat.

Sounds neat? The astronauts are paying a price for this neat experience. Since they are not under the influence of gravity, their bodies are subject to some severe stresses.

There are two major problems associated with long-term travel in space. To date, we have only experienced short-term space travel, considering that it takes 18 months to reach Mars.

One of the problems associated with space flight is tremendous shifts in body fluids. Because we are no longer subject to gravity, the fluid in our body shifts to the upper part of our torso. This creates "bird legs," stuffy noses, and puffy faces.

Appearance aside, translocation of body fluid has potentially severe physiological implications. These include cardiovascular changes, loss of weight, and decreases in blood volume. Of particular interest to scientists at Penn State is the decreased delivery of hormones and nutrients to tissues affected by this shift in body fluid. What are the implications of these changes? How can they be counteracted? Engineers and biologists are trying to answer these questions.

The second major problem associated with prolonged space travel is loss of bone. Again, on earth, standing and walking exerts physical stresses on our bones and muscles which serve to stimulate the continual buildup and breakdown of these tissues. Under conditions of microgravity (space), this stimulus is not present and breakdown exceeds buildup. It has been projected that a trip to Mars might totally obliterate an astronaut's bones.

As with fluid shifts, scientists are trying to develop countermeasures which will allow astronauts to maintain bone during prolonged space travel.

There are some encouraging developments. First of all, it appears that after a period of time bone losses stabilize, so the projected scenario may not be as bad as originally painted. Secondly, exercise equipment is being designed to help astronauts keep physically active. Finally, scientists are developing strategies which will minimize bone loss and restore bone formation.

The results of this research will have important implications for humans on earth as well as broilers and turkeys in poultry houses.

Leiby On Vegetable Growers Program

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.) — Robert Leiby, Lehigh County extension agent, will speak on "profitable potato production practices" at the Northeast Vegetable Growers meeting on Thursday, February 4 at Thompson's Dairy Bar on the Newton-Ransom Boulevard in Lackawanna County from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Arranged by Cooperative Extension and the Lackawanna County Horticultural Association, the meeting is open to all vegetable growers.

Robert Leiby

Reservations are $10 and can be made with the Lackawanna County Cooperative Extension, 200 Adams Avenue, Scranton, PA 18503 or call (717) 963-6842 by February 1.

Other topics on the program include tomato and sweet corn varieties, insect and disease control on vegetables, safe use of pesticides, and information on the new Chemsweep program of the Department of Agriculture for the collection of unusable ag chemicals in Lackawanna and Wyoming counties. Training credits will be provided for recertification of private applicators of restricted use pesticides who register before the meeting begins.

Call It 'New Holland n.v.'

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The corporate identity of N.H. Geotech N.V., the Fiat Group company formed in 1991 to head Fiat activities related to tractors, farm machinery and construction equipment, is being renamed New Holland n.v., incorporated in the Netherlands with a coordinating office in London, England.

The New Holland-based farm and industrial equipment manufacturer Ford New Holland, Inc., an operating division of New Holland n.v., will not be affected by the name change, nor will the brand names of Ford and New Holland.

Corporate officials said the revision reflects the worldwide image of New Holland as a name synonymous with quality, development, innovation, and service.

With annual revenues of about $4 billion, New Holland n.v. operates on all continents through its affiliates, distributors, and joint ventures. Its products are marketed under recognized brand names such as Ford (agricultural and industrial tractors), New Holland (agricultural machinery), FiatAgri (agricultural tractors and machinery), and Fiat Hitachi (construction equipment).

Beef Evening

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Beef producers in the Berks, Lebanon, and Schuylkill County areas will want to attend the February 2 Beef Educational Evening.

It will be held at Trainer's (Midway) Diner on Rt. 78/22, Exit 5. The program will feature Lou Moore, Penn State extension economist, who will discuss the agriculture outlook for the United States and the world for the 1990s.

Moore, who just returned from trips to Poland and other European countries, will relate how changes in other countries will affect beef producers in our area.

In addition, Dr. Lynn Sammons, Willow Creek Animal Hospital, will discuss vaccinations and Johne's certification for beef herds.

The program will begin with a beef dinner beginning at 5:30 p.m. with the talks at 6:45 p.m. The evening is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Berks/Southeast Cattlemen's Association.

Registration is $6 for the dinner and no charge for the program. To register and for more information, contact Clyde Myers at the Berks County Agriculture Center, P.O. Box 520, Leesport, PA 19533, (215) 378-1327.

Farmers Can Gather Retail Advice At Conference

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — If supermarket managers gather once at year at the Supermarket Industry Convention, gourmet store managers flock to the Fancy Foods Show, and natural foods store managers brush up at the Natural Products Expo, then what's the central event for farm market managers?

Answer: The Mid-Atlantic Direct Marketing Conference and Trade Show.

Purpose: To help farmers make more money selling directly to consumers.

Result: More farm families who'll survive the 1990s and more consumers who know the meaning of "farm fresh."

This year's Mid-Atlantic Direct Marketing Conference and Trade Show takes place on Thursday and Friday, February 18 and 19, at the Lancaster Host Resort just east of Lancaster on Route 30.

Tours of Lancaster area farm markets occur on Saturday, February 20. A preconference idea exchange takes place on Wednesday evening, January 17.

Why do farmers who sell to consumers attend the Mid-Atlantic Direct Marketing Conference and Trade Show?

Ask Fred Funk, Manager of Funk's Farm Market near Millersville in Lancaster County.

"There's no way farmers can survive on wholesale prices — which haven't improved much over the 30 years I've been raising crops. But when we start to retail our fruits, vegetables, plants, meats, dairy products, we take on some new headaches and gigantic competitors. We need all the knowledge, tips, and inspiration we can get."

Funk is on the conference planning committee, which saw to it that the conference program addressed the issues that matter to farmers.

For instance, the two-day conference program features:

- Thirteen hours of presentations.
- 34 speakers, half of whom are farm marketers sharing ideas that worked for them.
- Five periods of concurrent sessions on hot topics.
- A trade show of suppliers open to attenders.

This annual event is organized by Cooperative Extension staff from Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and New Jersey, along with farmers involved in direct marketing and state department of agriculture staff. The event rotates among the four states, and moves to Maryland in 1994.

The program is geared to those farmers who sell their products directly to consumers — primarily fruit and vegetable growers who run retail roadside stands or farmers' market stalls. But other operations with direct sales can benefit from the conference, including milk juggers, livestock and poultry farms, farm-based bakeries, wineries, and greenhouses.

All of these producers wrestle with the issue, "What's the best direction for my retail outfit?" The conference theme, "Paths to Success," addresses that perennial issue.

Each farm family has their own situation and goals and, through the conference, they'll see how they can achieve them. Attenders will come away with a clearer view of the marketing choices they have and their probable outcomes.

The conference opens with a keynote address on the need to be committed to customer satisfaction. Retailers tend to brush this point off with a "sure, we aim to please!" However, the presenter, Dr. John Stanton, will explore the implications for direct marketers of this commitment. This address, 'Customer Satisfaction — Where All Paths Begin," takes the audience on a thinking-cap tour of consumers' food shopping decisions and how that relates to what's done in the back room of the typical market.

Stanton, a food marketing consultant, has just returned from a six-month consultation with the world's largest food retailer, Tenglemans of Germany (parent of A&P and Shop Rite). He has also consulted with Campbell Soup Company and several other national and regional food firms. Stanton is a professor of food marketing at St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia. In 1991, he co-authored the book, "Making Niche Marketing Work."

Stanton's address will be followed by a "reactor panel" of three farm market managers. They are Stanley Nehrbas of Sabrhen Farm, David Conover of Blossom Hill Farm, and Ronald Rohrbach of Rohrbach Farm Market. They will add their perspectives to Stanton's address.

The trade show opens after this keynote session, and conference goers have full access to the show through Friday afternoon. Exhibitors include a selection of these suppliers:

- Specialty food and beverage products
- Retail packaging, labeling, and sales promotion materials
- Services such as consultants and produce auctions.

A new station at the trade show will feature the latest resources that farm marketers should be aware of, such as Quaker Oat's low-cost "Self-Study Program in Retail Food Store Operations" or the latest reports from the Food Marketing Institute.

Thursday afternoon features two periods of concurrent sessions. Topics to be covered by outside speakers and farm marketers include customer service, new advertising methods, business plans for farm markets, post-harvest handling, and new approaches to direct marketing.

Most sessions have three speakers. The sessions break at 5 p.m. for supper.

Joseph Anthony of USDA at Beltsville, Md., is one of the speakers at the postharvest handling session. He will describe how a farmer can build a new batch cooling unit with off-the-shelf materials for under $1,000. The concept was recently unveiled for the first time in December at an ag engineers convention. This event marks one of the early presentations to mid-Atlantic farmers.

The evening offers farmer-to-farmer roundtables on topics as diverse as personal selling, recycling requirements, dried flowers and ribbons, retaining the farm market image, keeping kids in the business, and services that add value. The evening concludes with an ice cream social.

Friday morning has two more sets of concurrent sessions. The first set offers presentations on offering entertainment in the market, understanding baby-boomers, and setting up an estate plan. The second session covers major festivals for farms, how to learn what customers want, and part two of estate planning.

The afternoon program for Friday features an in-depth look at uniquely successful farm markets in Maryland, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. Each farm family presents slides and an insider's review of their market progress.

Pennsylvania is represented by the Merwarth farm family near Easton and their Upstream Farm Market. Their story describes the decision to re-open a dairy store closed six years ago, when they were dairying. One family member conducted an extensive feasibility study, which included surveys to consumers. Their new store takes the unusual approach of a gourmet foods store, deli, bakery and cafe. After the session, there will be a discussion of issues and problems that affect Pennsylvania farm markets. Friday concludes with a banquet, entertainment, and pool party.

The Saturday tour program begins with an address by Dr. Charles Coale, ag marketing specialist at Virginia Tech, entitled "How to Grow a Farm Market." Coale will share insights on how the farm market managers can plan their success for next season's cropping.

The tour buses then depart for A.L. Kauffman and Son's Farm Market, the Bird-in-Hand Farmers Market, Oregon Dairy Farm Market, Kitchen Kettle Village, Shady Maple Farm Market, and a quick review of the Leola Produce Auction.

For Saturday evening, conference and tour goers have the option to enjoy supper and "Nunsense" at the Dutch Apple Dinner Theatre.

The conference fee is $40 for the first attender from a farm market and $20 for additional attenders. The Friday banquet costs $30 and the Saturday breakfast buffet, talk, and tours cost $25. There is a 20 percent discount if reservations are made by February 1.

The Lancaster Host Resort is on Route 30, just east of Lancaster, and is in the heart of the region's shopping district. For those planning to stay at the hotel, special room rates are available — $45 for a single room and $49 for a double room. Attenders need to specify they are with the Mid-Atlantic Direct Marketing Conference.

For more information and the program and registration brochure, contact your county cooperative extension office or call the Penn State Short Course Office at (814) 865-8301.

National Ag Week In March

WASHINGTON D.C. — Across the United States of America, the more than 21 million men and women who provide the food and fiber that Americans depend on every day will be honored during the 20th anniversary of National Agriculture Week (March 14-20) and National Agriculture Day (March 20).

The theme, "American Agriculture — Growing Better Every Day", conveys the message that America's food and agriculture system is a progressive, forward-thinking industry that is continuously striving to improve its methods and better respond to consumer needs and trends.

National Agriculture Day and National Agriculture Week coincide with the beginning of spring, when thousands of farmers across the country are preparing their fields for planting. The annual observance is designed to direct attention to the important contributions made by the food and agriculture industry.

"Without a national observance, it is too easy to forget the important role the American food and agriculture industry plays in our daily lives," said Keith Nelson, chairman of the Agriculture Council of America, coordinator of the nationwide celebration. "We tend to take for granted the very industry that puts food on our table, clothes on our backs, and shelter over our heads each day. National Agriculture Week provides an opportunity for all Americans to take a moment and reflect upon the many ways agriculture touches their lives."

To mark the 20th Anniversary of National Agriculture Day and National Agriculture Week 1993, the Ag Council, through generous special funding from Deere and Company, has commissioned Bart Forbes to create an original oil painting. "The Faces of Agriculture" is the title of this year's painting, which illustrates the many people involved in America's food and agriculture industry. Posters of the painting will be produced and distributed by a number of agricultural groups and state departments of agriculture across the country. They will be available in mid-January for the cost of $5, which includes shipping and handling.

Pennfield Manager Retires

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Earl Birk, who has served as purchasing manager for Pennfield Corporation, 711 Rohrerstown Road, for 19 years, will be retiring on March 1.

Birk has 47 years of experience in the purchasing of grains and ingredients used in manufacturing animal feeds. He has also been responsible for railroad transportation for the company.

Prior to joining Pennfield, Birk was associated with J.W. Eshelman and Sons, Lancaster, and Carnation Company of York.

Succeeding Birk as purchasing manager will be Andrew Graybill. Graybill has 18 years of experience in purchasing and grain merchandising with Pennfield, and is a graduate of Susquehanna University.

Huisman Appointed President

OMAHA, Neb.—Rod Huisman was recently named president of Kuker-Parker Industries, Inc., a major manufacturer of agricultural sprayers, grain handling equipment, and utility trailers.

A veteran in the agricultural industry, Huisman worked with Monsanto Company for 20 years before joining Kuker-Parker. During his tenure at Monsanto, he served in several sales and product management positions.

Most recently, Huisman was based in Singapore as area director for Monsanto in Southeast Asia. Prior experience includes agricultural equipment retailing.

ASCS: Report Operation Changes

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Richard Troutman, chairman of the Berks County Stabilization and Conservation Committee, urged producers to report any changes in their farm operations which could affect farm program benefits during 1993.

"Farm records must be up-to-date in order for us to help producers get full program benefits," said Troutman. "If a farm will have a new owner effective for 1993, or if a change is made in the operation of an existing farm unit, producers should contact our office."

The ASCS official said requests to combine farms or divide a farm should be made as early as possible because reconstitutions require special processing as well as county committee approval.

Any changes in land owned or operated should be reported to ASCS as soon as possible.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that
- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

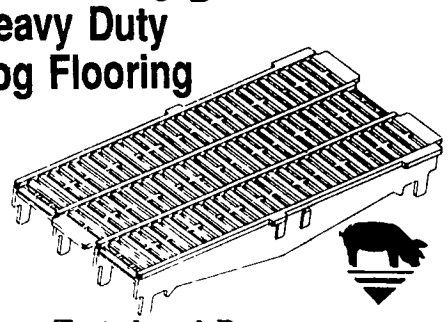
REPLACING HOG FLOORING? CONSIDERING NEW CONSTRUCTION? ☑ CHECK OUT Polygrate™

Heavy Duty Hog Flooring



Time Tested and Proven
This style of POLYGRATE was first introduced in 1981. Over the years Faroex has continued to refine this product. POLYGRATE is one of only a few "World Class" floors that has stood this test of time.

Outstanding Traction
POLYGRATE'S unique "high-low" finger design provides outstanding traction for pigs of all sizes, while enhancing safety and comfort.
- POLYGRATE'S rounded corners minimize injuries. The edges are bevelled providing a smoother, safer surface that promotes comfort, too.

What Does This All Add Up To?
- More piglets survive until weaning
- Less splay/spraddle leg problems
- Heavier piglets at weaning
- Better conditioned sows at weaning

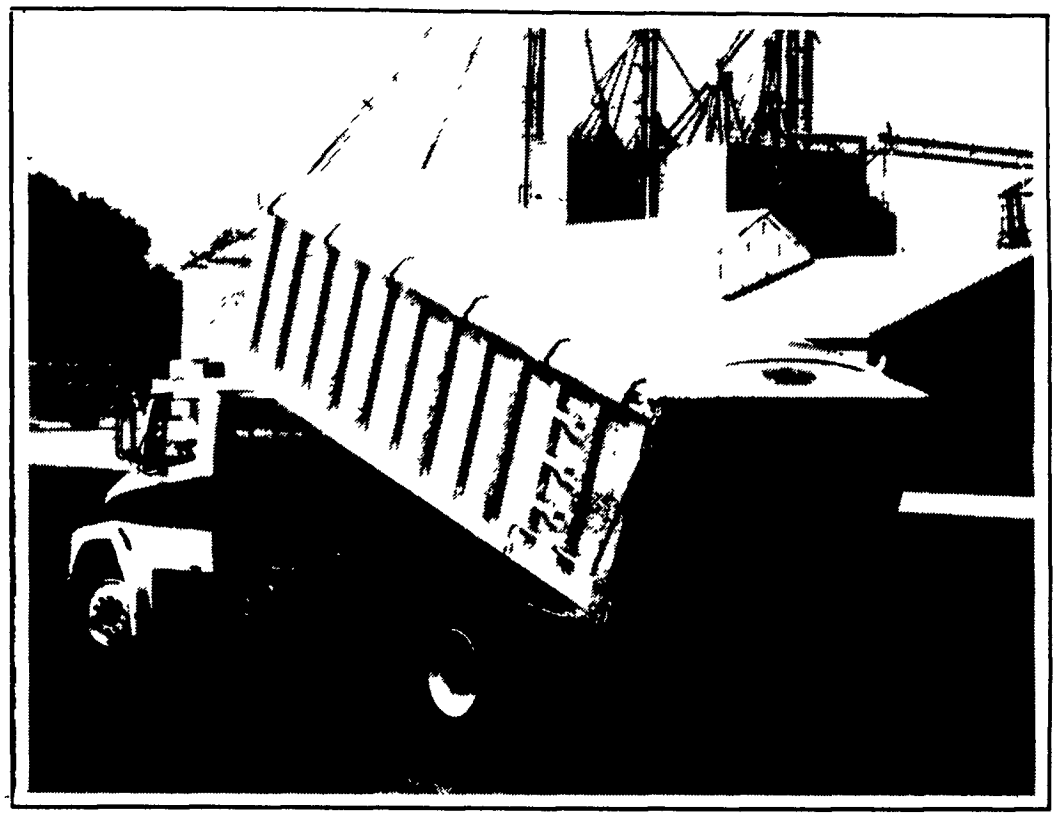
In grain bodies, aluminum makes $ense.



Eby Aluminum Grain Bodies pay off in dependable long-term service. Their all-aluminum construction means:

- Greater payload efficiency
- Maintenance-free service
- Substantially higher resale value.

If you think that steel is cheaper, think again. We can show you how aluminum actually saves you dollars in the long run.

Eby's time-tested design is available in lengths to 24' and a 48" standard height; optional heights include 54", 60" and 72". A long list of standard features such as tie rail, built-in steps, aerodynamic uprights and Harsh hoist is complemented by a full range of custom options, including tailgates, Wahpeton tarps and chute.

When you select your next grain body, consider the value that aluminum offers. It's a worry-free investment in your future.

RICHARD HOOVER & LAMAR HORST

Coatesville, Pa. Sensenig's Feed Mill

"Lamar and I are very happy with the Master Mix Herd Results."

"In our first week on Master Mix AminoTek®, we increased 3½ -4 lbs./cows/day. Then we hit some poor quality haylage for 3 weeks & dropped back to where we were. Then the haylage got better again & the cows took off!!! They increased from 66 lbs/cow to 73 lbs./cow & they're holding very well. Since the Master Mix AminoTek® switch, the herd average has increased over 1,000 lbs. & is still going up.

It is hard to believe 3 years ago we could never reach 18,000 lbs. RHA & we are now over 21,000 lbs. RHA. Before Master Mix AminoTek®, we never had a test of 75 lbs./cow/day & when we hit it, it was in July!! Lamar & I are very happy with Master Mix AminoTek® & what it is doing in our herd."

ADC Meets Farmers' Needs
More Than $124 Million in Extra Payments

Robert B. McSparran
President

"At Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, our mission is to maximize returns to members. In the past five years, we returned more than $124 million to members in equity payments, over-order premiums and quality bonuses. That's an average of $35,500 per member. And these extra dollars are continuing at the rate of $1.5 million a month.

"When non-members ask me why they should belong to Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, I am happy to report that we are financially healthy, strong in membership and growing in sales. ADC is the region's largest and most fiscally-sound cooperative, with a guaranteed market and outstanding benefits.

"More dairy farmers joined us last year than at any time in the past decade. If you are not an ADC shipper and are worried about your own milk market, then you should talk to the cooperative that is facing the future with confidence."

Mohair Producers Should File Receipts

YORK (York Co.) — The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) reminds wool and mohair producers to file their 1992 sales receipts by January 31, so that the documents can be used in determining the national average market price.

Although the deadline for filing 1992 receipts to qualify for 1992 price support payment is March 1, ASCS encourages wool and mohair producers to file in January because USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service needs the data in February to compute wool and mohair market prices.

"Since national average market prices are the basis for wool and mohair payment rates, producers are urged to submit their sales documents to us at least by the end of January," said E. Wayne Beshore, chairperson of the York County ASC Committee.

He reminds producers that "activity engaged in farming" and "person" determinations must be made to be eligible for a payment.

"For 1992 and subsequent marketings, the status date for wool and mohair producer's eligibility determination is the date the first application is submitted but no later than December 1 of the applicable marketing year," Beshore said. "Additionally, the policy regarding payments to no more than three entities under the acreage reduction program applies to wool and mohair producers as well."

Wool and mohair producers are required to certify that they are in compliance with highly erodible land and wetland conservation provisions.

"We encourage producers to bring in their 1992 sales receipts as soon as possible," Beshore said.

- This is your ideal tillage tool because it does an excellent job on seedbed prep and preplant chemical incorporation. In many cases it'll be your one pass tillage tool too
- New 5 bar frame is constructed out of large 4"x4" tubing for extra strength
- "S" tines or "C" shanks are spaced farther apart for more residue clearance and less plugging
- Arrangement of shanks eliminates chemical stripping around tires
- Self leveling hitch with mechanical wing control keeps cultivator level front to rear and side to side
- Convenient hand crank depth control adjusts in 1/8" increments
- Choose 14.7" to 41.5" rigid flat or tent fold models
